Acknowledgements

I am indebted to a large number of persons, to whom, I offer my gratitude for completion of the thesis. Most indebted I feel to Dr. T.V.Rao, my research guide, for his valuable guidance, continuous support and sustained encouragement throughout the period of the research work. But for his incessant support, highly penetrating observations and constructive criticism, the thesis would have not taken its present shape. He not only gave me insights into the nuances of change management that encouraged me continuously to stretch existing ideas to new levels, but also taught me, through his life and work, the mantra of working with a missionary zeal.

I am also grateful to Mr. Rajan Nanda, chairman of Escorts group, for his unconditional faith in my abilities to create the type of culture that the management team had visualized for the company. His deep commitment towards developing the desired culture was a major pillar of support for me throughout the change management exercise. I would also like to convey my special thanks to Mr. Nanda for all the support provided to me for the research study, including his sparing about six hours of time for responding to my various questions, during the interview.

I also express my deep gratitude to a large number of colleagues in Escorts. In particular, I am thankful to the members of the core group for invariably pitching in, whenever I needed any kind of help. Thanks are also due to the managers, union leaders and all other employees of Escorts with whom I have worked and who have demonstrated that value-based change was possible.

I also owe much to the authors and thinkers who have influenced my thought process. Most of them are featured in the references. Their stimulating thinking and writing has catalyzed my own.

Thanks are also due to Mr. Rajan Sinha for sharing certain thoughts and experiences that proved to be of great help in my research study.

Finally, I am very grateful to my family members for always being there whenever I needed them to take over all my family responsibilities, to leave me with abundant time to continue my research work. Special thanks to my wife, for just being there, a constant source of loving support and cheerful help. While on the whole the study proceeded satisfactorily towards culmination, it did have its moments of frustration and despair. At such time it was only the encouragement from my wife to stick to the research and reminding me of what matters most. I am so grateful to her for being so understanding during all the months I was in banaprastha.

The research study could never have been completed without constant guidance, inspiration and blessings received by me from the unseen hand of the Divine Grace.
