Prologue

"Until recently, the majority of naturally occurring phenols, were ignored by biochemists, who have generally been more concerned with seeking unity rather than diversity in nature, and were only seriously investigated by chemists.

It is no longer possible, therefore, to ignore the very real biological importance of these fascinating substances"

J.B. Harborne