ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to express here my deep sense of gratitude to Prof. D.N. Pathak, Head of the Department of Political Science and Director, School of Social Sciences, Gujarat University, for his keen interest, encouragement, thought-provoking comments and valuable guidance in the course of the study and in the preparation of this dissertation. I know that my words are inadequate to express my gratitude to him.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge my indebtedness to Shri Pravin Sheth, Reader in Political Science, Gujarat University, for having evinced personal interest in the progress of the study. I have, indeed, greatly benefited from his constructive criticism at all stages of the work. I also express my sincere thanks to many of my colleagues, especially Sudhir Mukherjee of Psychology, Manubhai Patel of Sociology, Jayant Pandya of Political Science and Manubhai S. Patel of Mogri for their interest and help in my work.

I am also grateful to the authorities of the Gujarat University for being generous in extending the time-limit for submitting my thesis. I, however, regret the delay caused by unexpected eye-trouble due to cataract in my both eyes.

Last but not the least, I am extremely grateful to the people of Mogri for their whole-hearted cooperation and generous hospitality extended to me.
