Vakil, K., op. cit., p. 65, An additional reason for the teaching of English was the conqueror’s wish to impose upon his subjects his own language. In the words of Charles Grant (1797) “to introduce the language of the conquerors seems to be an obvious means of assimilating the conquered people to them”. The muslims had already done it, Therefore, he suggested, “it would have been in our interests to have followed their example”; Vakil Vakil, K., p. 66.
