ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I sincerely express my gratitude to my guide, Dr. R. G. Nambiar, Director, Sardar Patel Institute of Economic and Social Research, Ahmedabad. He was kind enough to guide me through this research work with his meticulous guidance, encouragement and support. With his open and questioning mind, straightforward attitude and his friendship, it was easy to work under him.

I consider myself fortunate for being able to interact with Dr K L Krishna, on a number of occasions, and receive his help and guidance, especially with regard to the quantitative parts of this thesis. It is my duty to recognize the support and encouragement that I received from Dr Nagesh kumar, Director General, RIS, towards the completion of this research. Words alone cannot reveal the depth dimension of one’s gratitude. All the same, I am especially grateful to Dr Rajesh Mehta, Senior Fellow, RIS, whose sharp, focussed, timely and valuable observations and comments have helped to deepen this research, qualitatively. A number of individuals have played a crucial role at different stages of this thesis. Among them, I wish to particularly recognize the help received from Dr Ram Upendra Das and Mr Robert. I gracefully acknowledge the enormous support and academic help extended by Dr. Sachin Chaturvedi all through this study. I must acknowledge that I have benefited tremendously from my discussions with Mr. Saikat Sinha Roy. Mr Anoop Kumar provided me with excelleft computer and statistical assistance, and I am grateful to him for his help.

I am thankful to the Research and Information System for the Nonaligned and Other Developing Countries (RIS), New Delhi, and also the Sardar Patel Institute of Economic and Social Research (SPIESR), Ahmedabad for providing me with the required facilities and the opportunity to complete this work. I am very much indebted to the India Habitat Centre Library, New Delhi, for providing excellent library facilities to undertake this work.

Finally, I must state that this work was not possible without the support and encouragement from my family members. Particularly, I am thankful to my wife, Ms Puspa Mitra Mohanty who endured an overworked husband and supported towards completing this thesis, in her own way. Last, but not the least, I wish to take note of my little daughter Ms Anannya, who spent several restless days without seeing her preoccupied father at home.
