PERSONAL - IMPERSONAL

The ambition is fulfilled and the dream has come true. Every single colour on this canvas is attributed to one or the other person or institution. I owe to them much more than I can express in words. Yet, the highest contribution has been from Dr. Yashomatiben F. Patel, my Guide in this research, who with continued sprinkles of her love and affection of a true teacher synthesized her motherly care, learned mind and sympathetic attitude to inspire me in designing the combination of all colours which made this canvas a creative piece in true sense. She had and has always been a source of renewed energy.

This work would never have shined out in its total perspective but for the invaluable help and guidance of Dr. D.N. Sansanwal, Professor of Education, DAVV, Indore. Even a few drops from the ocean of his vast knowledge and experience would have enriched my work to an indescribable satisfaction. I was fortunate to amass more than a potful of wealth from this ocean. Whenever I approached him with some problem, either personally or by post, he was always lively responsive, prompt and obliging.

The experiment was the heart of this research. Principals H.K. Vyas, Vivekanand College of Education, Ahmedabad and Dr. D.S. Shukla, Principal, M.N. Shukla College of Education, Ahmedabad pumped life into my major task of carrying out the experiment with their willing co-operation. I wish to express a feeling of gratitude to all my seniors and contemporaries at Vivekanand
College of Education, Ahmedabad for providing me facilities and much needed motivation.

Equal appreciation is also for my young friends who underwent the treatment and/or the tests with enthusiasm and profound faith.

I have had the benefit of discussion with some experts. I remember with respect the names of Dr. Pratiksha Raval, Dr. Baqchi, Dr. D.C. Parikh, Dr. K.G. Desai, Dr. L.C. Singh, Dr. J.H. Shah and Dr. K.K. Bhatt. I express my gratitude to them for their valuable suggestions. I am indebted to Dr. D.N. Sansanwal and Dr. D.S. Shukla for granting me an opportunity to attend the orientation courses on Models of Teaching, Research Methodology and Statistics held at their institutions. I cannot forget the homely treatment I received from the DAVV family of teachers and students during my stay at Indore for more than once.

I sincerely acknowledge my gratitude towards the authors* and researchers whose works have helped me enrich my work. The computation of data was a real heavy task. Shri Kalpesh Pathak, my brother in law made it as light as anything with his statistical skills and computer expertise.

The work has been decorated and given a physical shape by Shri Harekrishnabhai Patel and Saumil Patel with careful skill. They have been my moral supporters throughout.

My gratefulness is due to all those who have helped me on one or the other occasion during my work.
My close friend Dr. Ramila C. Salvi provided valuable help and her suggestions were always useful to me.

I owe my family a lot. I have always been inspired by my father late Prof. V.K Shah. He would have been the happiest man in this universe on this day. I pay respects to his fond memory. My mother Chandrikaben, through her selfless love, care and dedication, has made me obliged in every respect. My brother Malay V. Shah, my younger sister Sonya Kalpesh Pathak, brother in law Kalpesh Pathak and loving nephew Adit have been a source of inspiration for me. They all have absorbed every inconvenience caused by me with whole-heart. I remember with high regards Shri Bhupendrabhai Trivedi, my brother-in-law, who is in place of my father in law. My similar respects are for Vinodaben too. Their love knows no bounds. Only the most fortunate can avail it, and I am.

Above all, my husband Divyesh Trivedi, who has been my friend, philosopher and guide, co-operated and never complained for any inconvenience, supported me in my work with total dedication. His happiness to day makes me the wealthiest woman in the world.

Last but not the least, I bow my head to our Guruji Swami Manuvaryaji, whose blessings mean lot to us.
