ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This dissertation reflects powerful influence of Dr. Ramadhar Singh on my professional training and scientific attitude. He introduced me to information integration theory and its possible applications to developmental psychology at Indian Institute of Technology, Kanpur in 1975. The past eight years have really been exciting, informative, and pleasant to me, for they have convinced me that psychology can be as scientific as any other natural science. I am grateful to Dr. Singh for his technical counsel, his interest in my rigorous training, and his effort in creating an atmosphere conducive to sound research. It is indeed a great pleasure to state that he acted as a "friend, philosopher, and guide" during the period of research reported in this dissertation.

For some time I was associated with the research project on "Attribution of Performance by Children, Parents, School Teachers, and Managers" sponsored by the Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi to Professor Ramadhar Singh. This association enabled me to develop much deeper insight into my work than what is commonly available to an individual researcher in India. Special thanks are due to Professor N.R. Sheth for his invaluable intervention in getting a room in the hostel of Gujarat University which was otherwise being denied to me.

I wish to record my sincere thanks to Mr. J.N. Mattoo, Principal, Campus School, Indian Institute of Technology, Kanpur; Mr. S.M. Jain, Principal, Central School, Shahibaug, Ahmedabad; and Mrs. Perinben Lalkaka, Principal, Thumbelina Nursery and Kindergarten School, Narayanpura, Ahmedabad, for extending me all the facilities and full cooperation in the collection of data. I owe much to my student Ms. Neelam Tiwari who was of great help in completing the first experiment. Mr. Shivganesh Bhargava and Mrs. Madhu Singh cheerfully rendered their help in the analyses of data. I am deeply grateful to them for their technical and social support during my stay at Ahmedabad. I am also thankful to Dr. Gautam R. Jain and Mr. P.B. Nagananda Kumar for their cooperation during my stay at Ahmedabad.
Miss R. Usha, Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad, took painstaking care in typing the entire manuscript. She also helped me in numerous ways. I am deeply grateful to her for her help, guidance, and warm company at difficult times. I also thank Mr. R. Swaminathan for his meticulous care in typing the tedious tables of the appendices.

I wish to remember and thank all of my teachers who tried to make something special out of me. Without their encouragement and support, I might not have achieved whatever I could so far. Special thanks are also due to my uncle and brothers for their interest in my education and advancement. I am also grateful to my friend, Meenakshi Borwanker, for her interest in my personal growth and happiness.

Ahmedabad
October, 1983

PRABHA SRIVASTAVA