PREFACE

In applied Psychology Clinical Psychology is one of the special branches of methodology and is concerned with the adjustment problems of the individual. Its methods, therefore, may be used in different types of situations. So here a systematic attempt has been made to understand the conflict-areas of employees working in various job situations with the help of newly prepared Job Incomplete Sentence Blank (JISB).

The use of Verbal Projective Techniques in any kind of Psychological Investigation is still new in Gujarat. The present work, therefore, is just a beginning in that direction. The investigator wishes that this kind of research may be undertaken more and more to understand the basic properties of the JISB.

The investigator wishes to express his sincere appreciation and deep gratitude to Dr. Kusum K. Bhatt, Lecturer at the University School of Psychology, Education and Philosophy, Gujarat University, for her invaluable advice, guidance and interest in helping to complete this thesis work. The investigator also wants to thank Dr. V.P. Sharma, B.M. Institute, Ahmedabad for his valuable advice for the preparation of the Job JISB. He is also thankful to the Heads of the various Banks and Principals of various Colleges for their whole hearted co-operation in this investigation. Last but not the least investigator is very much thankful to the employees of various Govt. Departments, Banks and Colleges, who co-operated in giving necessary data with great interest which facilitated the present investigation. He is equally thankful to Mr. R.K. Modi for typing the manuscript neatly, quickly and correctly.
