ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The path to the completion of a thesis is a long and arduous one and mine was no different. What made it all bearable was the love and support of some special people, whom I want to acknowledge as a small token of my gratitude and appreciation.

First, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my guide, Prof. Dr. A. Ramachandran, Registrar, CUSAT, for taking me on as a research student and for giving me the full freedom to choose my topic and to pursue my own line of thought. His thoughtful insights have often spurred me on to explore new avenues of scientific knowledge. He always found time to correct my thesis, in spite of his busy schedule. Thank you Sir for everything!

Prof. Dr. Saleena Mathew, Director, School of Industrial Fisheries, has always lent me a helping hand to iron out all the academic hurdles, and I am indeed grateful to her for her support. I also thank her for the valuable suggestions she offered during my pre-synopsis presentation.

Prof. Ramakrishnan Korakandy and Prof. B. Madhusoodana Kurup have helped me shape my thesis into its present form with their valuable suggestions and comments, and I am very thankful to them.

I also thank all the other teaching faculty of the School of Industrial Fisheries, for their guidance throughout my long association with this School.

I am grateful to the managements of all the firms I surveyed, for giving me their valuable time, information and useful comments.

I am indebted to the library staff of the CUSAT Marine Sciences Library, Central Library and School of Management Studies Library, MPEDA Library and CIFT Library for helping me collect my literature.

The office staff of this School have always lent me their timely assistance which helped me finish my work here without any hassles, and I am indeed grateful to them for it.
Next, I wish to thank Dr. Mini Sekharan, for her love, support and sisterly affection, which helped me tide over many a depressing and frustrating day. The academic discussions I had with her helped me a lot to give form to my ideas and thoughts.

This journey would have been very dreary had it not been for the stimulating company of my best friend Anupama. Anu, you have been a pillar of strength, thanks a lot for being there always!

I would also like to remember with affection the people who made my tenure in this School memorable – Shyma chechi, Ancy chechi, George, Shubhasree, Pramod, Sunesh and Prasanth.

This thesis would have been incomplete without the unstinting help from a number of friends –
Sindhu, for her moral support,
Arun, who was always a click away, acting as trouble shooter for all my computer-related problems (and they were numerous!!!), and
Jones, Rajesh and Sujith, for helping me with the survey and data collection.

I could always depend on Gipson to lend me a helping hand whenever I needed it. Thanks pal!

I am grateful to the authorities at Kannur University, for permitting me to take leave to complete my thesis. I also thank my friends there for making my stay there memorable.

Athulya Hostel, CUSAT will always hold a special place in my heart, for I have forged many life-long friendships there. Thank you all, especially Susan, Nimi, Seena, Nitha and Jincy.

Next, I wish to lovingly acknowledge the loving support provided by Amma, Ranjini aechi, Suji ettan and Shajeev. This venture would not have been successful, if they had not given me loads of time off from all responsibilities!
Rakesh ettan and Salini chechi have been very supportive and have also undergone personal sacrifices in order to help me finish my work. Thank you both for your love and care.

Special thanks are in order to Sruthi mol and Navaneeth kuttan, for reminding me every now and then that life is more important than research and for filling it with joy.

Thanking my parents seems a bit stilted, after all the sacrifices and hardships they had to endure, especially during these five years. It is from them I have inherited my capacity for hard work, determination and the grit to see things through. Thank you Achan and Amma, for putting up with everything - for all the times I have been careless, irritant, moody and distracted! Thank God, you two never gave up on me!

Last but not the least, had it not been for my husband, Jidesh, I would not have enrolled as a research scholar. He has supported, scolded, encouraged and cajoled me through every step in this journey and has been right by my side all through, patiently. Thank you my dear for everything!

I am grateful to Shri Guruvayurappan for providing me all the blessings and strength for making this effort a success.
