I take this opportunity to express my deep and sincere appreciation of Dr. K. G. Desai, Director and Professor of Education, University School of Psychology, Education and Philosophy, Gujarat University for his kind help in this entire project. Dr. Desai's counsel was always available and his valuable suggestions and guidance have contributed much to the success of this research.

I also express my feeling of gratitude to Shri G. B. Parikh, Principal, Secondary Teachers Training College, Ahmedabad for allowing me to try out the curriculum on the student teachers and also for extending to me all facilities.

Thanks are also due to the student teachers of the Secondary Teachers Training College, Ahmedabad who gave me excellent co-operation while the curriculum was being tried out on them during the academic year 1977-78.

Lastly, I feel grateful to all the friends, colleagues and relatives who helped and encouraged me. It was because of their help, encouragement and inspiration that I could complete this work within a period of two years and a half.

Ahmedabad

January, 1979