"Strength does not come from physical capacity. It comes from an indomitable will." - Jawaharlal Nehru, Autobiography.

Keeping in mind these words of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, the first Prime Minister of Democratic Free India, the present investigation was mainly carried out to meet the four-fold objections. Firstly, to know the composition of the personality, value-orientations profiles and rated morale of the military personnel in general and Army officers in particular. Secondly, to know the main and joint-action influences of the types of military organization such as, military and para-military and types of cadre such as, commissioned and non-commissioned, upon the magnitude of each well established personality trait, each value orientation and rated morale of the Army officers. Thirdly, to know the strength of association of rated morale with each well established personality trait and value-orientation of the Army officers. And finally, to provide scientific norms regarding the personality, value-orientations and rated morale of the military officers, which could be fruitfully used for scientific selection of the new recruits and their development through military training in the desirable direction so as to serve the motherland more and more effectively.

Indeed, such a scientific endeavour crystalized around the hub of Military Psychology, would not have been a success if my esteemed
Supervisor, Dr. R.D. Helode, Professor and Head, Department of Psychology and Dean, Faculty of Social Sciences, Ravishankar University, Raipur (M.P.) could not have guided me at numerous critical steps. I like this opportunity, therefore, to place on record my deep sense of gratitude to Professor Helode, whose untiring intellectual guidance and supervision with smiling face, proved of an immense help and inspiration to me in the completion and presentation of this modest doctoral research work.

I am also thankful, from the bottom of my heart, to Prof. N.S. Chauhan, Centre of Advance Studies in Psychology, Meerut University, Meerut, for his collaboration with me in the development of the "Army Officers Morale Scale" and for his generous permission to make use of it as well as his "Value-Orientations Scale" in the present piece of research.

I feel too poor to find the words extending my sense of gratitude to Dr. Shankar Roy, Professor and Head, Department of Geography, Ravishankar University, Raipur for his timely help in getting myself registered with the University for this doctoral research work in his tenure of Deanship of the faculty of Social Sciences, Ravishankar University, Raipur as a teacher candidate and also for his grow-gray advice in the times of difficulties.

I am equally grateful to all those military and para-military commissioned and non-commissioned Army officers and their immediate superiors who participated in this research as the subjects. I know, without their active cooperation during the phases of data collection, this work could not have been successfully completed.
I feel too tiny to express my deeply felt sense of gratitude to my father, Shri H.S.Dwivedi, Editor, Rural India, Bombay, for the encouragement and financial assistance given to me during the implementation of this scientific endeavor.

I also take this opportunity to extend my thankfulness to my friends and well-wishers, Dr. G.S.Parashar, Dr.S.S.Joshi, Dr. R.A.Sharma and Dr.I.B.Singh for extending their helping hands while this work was in progress.

Last but not least, I am thankful to Shri Jagdish Agrawal, who took lot of pains in typing out the pages of this piece of research with commandable speed and accuracy that enabled me to present it in the form of a thesis.
