ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to place on record my deepest sense of gratitude to my guide

Dr. Diwakar Thomas, M.A., M.Phil., M.A., M.Ed., M.A., Ph.D., Associate Professor and Head, Department of English (PG), Kongunadu Arts and Science College, Coimbatore, whose experience and expertise in research work have enriched the dissertation. He has helped shape my views and thoughts on Canadian Literature and contribute in a befitting manner. His meticulous and systematic guidance have eased my journey of exploring drama in Canada. Moreover they have lent the research a distinct flavour. He has instilled the desire to try and rise above mediocrity and produce a work which will be useful to fellow researchers as well as to the general public. I owe my sincere thanks to him for vesting confidence in me and accommodating me amongst his candidates.

I owe a token of gratitude to the committee at Bharathiar University which has introduced External Part Time mode in Doctoral Research. It has understood the need of the hour and helped free lancers like me realise their dreams in continuing research work. My special thanks are also due to The Director, Research and Development, Bharathiar University, to Dr. Palanivel and Dr. Saravana Selvan, Department of English and Foreign Languages, Bharathiar University, for their inputs during the review sessions. Their in depth knowledge in all genres of English Literature amazed me and propelled me to contribute my mite.

The Indian Association of Canadian Studies which is doing yeoman service in introducing Canadian Literature to Indian students and helping them source materials needs a special mention at this juncture. But for the Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute, Delhi which houses a library devoted to Canadian studies my dissertation would not have materialised since there is a dearth of primary and secondary source availability in South India.

My heartfelt thanks to the late Dr. Shyamala Sivanandham, former Head of the Department, Avinashilingam University, Coimbatore, who was instrumental in advising me to take up this research. I wish to thank Dr. Asha Priya, my former colleague at Avinashilingam University, for her invaluable support during the making of this dissertation. I wish to extend my gratitude to Ms. V. Kalpana, Professor of English, Avinashilingam University for her encouragement and goodwill which helped shape my thesis. I also wish to thank Dr. Shobha Ramaswamy, Assistant Professor of English, Kongunadu Arts and Science College, Coimbatore for proof reading the manuscript.

My sincere appreciation are due to my father, Mr. K. Palaniappan and my husband, Mr. N. Sivaprakasam for their wholehearted support which guided me through this investigative journey. I wish to extend my gratitude to include members of my family for their unstinted co-operation and help. I wish to make a special mention of my daughter, S. Harsini, who has not only accompanied me during the umpteen visits to my guide's place but also sacrificed the time which might have otherwise been hers. Mrs. Juno D. Thomas needs a mention here for her tolerance in listening to our discussions as well as for her hospitality.

I owe a deep sense of gratitude to the indomitable spirit in me which has helped me stride through this exploration with relative ease. It has also helped me enjoy wading through the various chapters and made me realise that happiness is not found at the end of the tunnel but along the way.

Finally and most importantly, I humbly acknowledge the presence of the Almighty and beseech His blessings for the successful outcome of this dissertation.
