ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There are a great number of individuals who contributed to the development and completion of this thesis through their gift of time, support, advice and belief. I am indebted to Professor Mahmood S. Khan for his patience, careful supervision and encouragement throughout the years of my research. It has been a wonderful experience to find myself able to call upon such renowned leading scholars. I am beholden to the ideal that this people have set in accomplishing the impossible with the improbable.

I am also indebted to Professor Sultan Akhtar for his encouragement throughout the years of my research. My sincere appreciation is also extended to the Department of Psychology of A. M. U., Aligarh, India in particular for their kind words and support for this study and encouraging their participation. I would like to express my gratitude to Bank employees in Iran and India for their kind permission in accessing potential participants and in assisting with the delivery of surveys to the employees. To all of those lecturers at the various universities in the teachers and staff of the Department of Psychology of A. M. U., Aligarh that I hounded in search of students for my research I owe a debt of gratitude and send my sincere apologies. Without your help my project would have stalled at the beginning stages.

I would like to express my deep and sincere appreciation to all of the Bank employees who gave of their precious time and effort to help formulate the study and the wonderful legacy of their thoughts and ideas on the profession that they have selflessly given me.

Finally, I would like to thank my family and Dr. Baqer Kord who encouraged me for Ph. D. programme, Mahmoud Bameri who taught me English language, Mohammad Ali Mohammady Far who was the best supporter for me from start to finish my thesis, friends and work colleagues for their unending tolerance, encouragement and support over the years of my candidature.
