PREFACE

This thesis aims at the study of the Non-Persian Inscriptions of Medieval India. Regionally its scope is confined to Delhi, Punjab and U.P., chronologically its terminal dates being A.D. 1191 and 1707. So far only a very limited number of Sanskrit and Nagari Inscriptions have been utilised and that, rather partially and cursorily by the scholars of medieval Indian History. In fact an intensive and critical study of these epigraphs has been a great desideratum. This humble work is an attempt to present these inscriptions in their chronological order, indicating also the rulers and the dynasties to which these inscriptions relate or refer. Apart from the fixing of chronological position of the inscriptions, the scope of this work includes discussions about genealogical tables, and the personal achievements of individual rulers belonging to different dynasties.

For this work I am greatly indebted to Dr. Nurul Hasan, Education Minister of India, who provided me with the opportunity to work on this interesting subject.

To my respected guide and supervisor, Professor K.A. Hisami, Head of the Department, Centre of Advanced Sincere thanks to the study in history, A.M.U., Aligarh, for the pains he has taken while leading me through all the phases of production of this work. Without his inspiration and energetic labour this work would not have been completed in such a short time.

I feel great pleasure in expressing my deep sense of gratitude to Professor Irshad Habib for his constructive suggestions and inspiration.

It is my humble duty to remember and thank to Mr. G.S. Gai, Chief Epigraphist, Archaeological Survey of India, Mysore for his kind help and guidance. This para would be incomplete without the mention of Mr. Z.A. Desai, Superintendent Epigraphist, Archaeological Survey of India, Jaipur; Mr. V.L. Joshi, Director, State Museum Lucknow; Mr. M.C. Sharma, Curator Archaeological Museum Mathura; Dr. Amend Krishna, Director, Bharat Kala Bhavan Varanasi; and Mr. S.C. Kala, Director, Allahabad Museum Allahabad for the procurement of the research-material and co-operation on the various stages of the work.

Further, in the end, I am thankful to the authorities of the Library of the Archaeological Survey of India, Delhi; National Museum Delhi; Maulana Azad Library, A.M.U. Aligarh and Seminar Library of History Department, A.M.U. Aligarh and to all those who assisted me during the work.

Pushpa Prasad

Pushpa Prasad