When years of earnest research finally translate into a neatly written thesis, it is easy to take all the credit, and pat oneself on the back for a gigantic task accomplished. The fact remains, however, that no work of such magnitude is possible without a whole network of support systems available to the research scholar. I consider myself both lucky and blessed to have been associated with people who went out of their way to lend me a helping hand - even before I asked for it. Though mere words are not sufficient, they are all I have to acknowledge, with deep gratitude, all the people whose names are mentioned below.

I wish to thank Professor S. Wiqar Husain, my supervisor, for the outstanding dedication with which he guided me through the entire research process. Not only did he share a wealth of literary information with me, but also provided unique and deep insights into every aspect of Toni Morrison's work. I am eternally grateful to him for giving me constant encouragement, and showing great optimism and faith in my abilities.

I am very thankful to Professor Maqbool Hasan Khan (retired), ex-chairman, Department of English, for all his help and support during the initial registration period. He was also kind enough to read through the synopsis and offer valuable suggestions. I shall always cherish his words of wisdom.

My heartfelt thanks go to Dr. Sakina Ammar Hasan who has always been a source of inspiration and encouragement. I am extremely grateful to her for giving me full access to her valuable collection of books, and for motivating me to do my best.

A very warm thank-you goes to the Management and Staff of the American Center Library at New Delhi and the American Studies Research Centre at Hyderabad where I had access to many priceless resources. Though the names of both these libraries have changed now, what has remained same is the pride they take in their work and the genuine effort they make to fulfil the increasing demands of a growing research population.

I am beholden to Ms. Sandra Sterner of Chatham College (Pittsburgh, PA, USA), who gave me my first reading list, and whose provocative and insightful questions and comments challenged me to deliberate upon and analyse a variety of literary problems. The debt I owe Sandy is great, and goes beyond just her support and encouragement during the writing of this thesis.
I also wish to thank, from the bottom of my heart, Dr. and Mrs. C. K. Thota, and their families, who opened their homes and hearts to me when I went to Hyderabad. Not only did they go out of their way to make my stay cozy and comfortable, but also took an active interest in my research work. I am truly indebted to them.

I am extremely appreciative of the hospitality extended to me by Dr. Satinder Bajaj at whose house I stayed when I went to Delhi for research related work. An avid reader of Morrison's books herself, she took time off from her busy schedule to discuss the novels with me, and I gained many a new insight as a result of these discussions.

I am very grateful to the Management of Hind Agro Industries Limited, Aligarh: Mr. Sirajuddin Quraishi – Managing Director, Dr. Naseem Quraishi – President, and Mr. C. Smit Martin for the interest they took in my work, and the numerous important ways in which they helped and supported me at every step. The special relationship I shared with each of them was my motivation and inspiration to do well.

I would like to send very special thanks to my friends - Ms. Sama Zafar, Dr. Sumati Singh, Ms. Zarin Moin, Dr. K. Appar, Dr. R. Padmanabhan and Seema, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. C. Naidu, Andrea and Peter O'Donnell, Tamra and Dave Dolinsky, Lisa and Todd Grazier, Carol Fris, Kay Knaup, Suzette Champaign, Mary Roufail, Kelly Jordan, and Levato Fisher - each of whom helped me in unique and extraordinary ways. The solace and assurance they gave whenever I seemed to lose sight of the goal will remain with me forever.

I want to mention specifically the help and cooperation offered to me by the seminar librarian, the office staff, and the general support staff of the English Department. The prayers and good wishes they constantly sent my way will always have a special place in my heart.

Finally, and most importantly, I want to express gratitude to all the members of my family – my grandmother, my parents, my brother, as well as my aunts, uncles and cousins (the Mirza and Ahmad families) – all of whom stood firmly by me during the most difficult of moments, and never allowed me to give up. Without their prayers, mentoring, advice, and even admonishments this accomplishment would have been impossible.

Though a lot has been said, there is still more that remains because debts of this magnitude are impossible to repay. All I can say is that a significant part of this success belongs also to each person mentioned in these pages. This achievement, finally, is theirs as much as it is mine.
