ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In retrospect, I readily acknowledge the help and assistance of a large number of people in the completion of this work.

The greatest debt is of course to my supervisor Rev. Dr. Jose Kuriedath. But for his valuable guidance and inspiration, this thesis would have never taken this form, and I reminisce with pride and gratitude, everything he had offered to me through out the course of this study. His own familiarity with the socio-political life of Kerala and his involvement’s with the area of this study etc., had made my task much easier.

This thesis has had a long period of development. I was first drawn to its theme in 1990, while working for my M. Phil dissertation in Jawaharlal Nehru University, Delhi, under the guidance of Prof. T. K. Oommen. The valuable guidances and inspirations that he had showered on me during those days, were always with me while conducting this research. I owe a debt of gratitude to him also.

Recalling the names of all who helped me in the preparation of this thesis is an almost impossible task; some are likely to be missed. Still a word of gratitude to few of them who cannot just be forgotten. First of all, I acknowledge my thanks to the Principal and Staff of the Rajagiri College of Social Sciences, Kalamasseri, Kochi, where I had registered myself as a research scholar. Also it is my bounden duty to put on record a word of thanks to the management’s, staff, and students of Co-operative Arts and Science College, Madayi, Kannur; Sacred Heart College, Thevara, Kochi; and finally Loyola College of Social Sciences,
Thiruvananthapuram, for their substantial help while pursuing my research and working as a Lecturer in these institutions.

I am also indebted to a number of other institutions who have also provided me with innumerable assistance, by allowing me to make use of their libraries and documents. Malayala Manorama, Kottayam; Institute of Management in Government Library, Thiruvananthapuram; Centre for Development Studies Library, Thiruvananthapuram; University Library, Thiruvananthapuram; Kerala Legislative Assembly Library, Thiruvananthapuram; Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, New Delhi; Nehru Memorial and Museum Library, Teen Murthy, New Delhi, etc., are the few names which cannot be omitted.

My thanks are also due to Shri. P. K. Michael Tharakan of Centre for Development Studies, Thiruvananthapuram, the discussions with whom helped me to articulate some of the arguments that I have brought forth in my thesis.

The remaining are the names of my friends whom I dare not include here as that is almost an endless list. However I do record the help I have received from my friend Anil Kesavan who took lot of pains to do the printing work of this thesis.

Several of my relatives have also helped me in this task and I do remember them all with gratitude.

Finally a word of deep appreciation to my wife Roshin without whose unfailing co-operation and support it could not have been written at all. My son Rohit had his own losses and I do recognise that too.
