Acknowledgement

Preparation of a doctoral dissertation is a difficult task especially for one who, working in a college, had to spare time at a stretch for a couple of months for field investigation. I could complete this work only because of the excellent guidance I have had from my supervisor and teacher Prof. S.N. Guhathakurta. I am greatly indebted to him not only for understanding the problems under which I had to work but also for his dedication in guiding me.

I am extremely grateful to my teachers, Prof. T. Mathew, Head of the Economics Department, for giving me necessary advice and encouragement, and to Dr. M. K. S. Nair for suggesting the title of the present study as well as some encouraging advice at the initial stage. To Prof. A. M. Goon (earlier of the Presidency College, Calcutta) of the Centre for Applied Statistics and Mathematics, NEHU, Dr. K. Bez and Mr. Shankar K. Ghosh of Economics Department, NEHU, I owe a debt of gratitude for helping me in tackling some statistical problems.

I also express my sincere thanks to Mr. Taposh Chakraborty of the RSIC, NEHU, for computer assistance, and to Prof. Sri Prakash, Dr. S. K. Mishra, both of Economics Department and Prof. P. K. Mishra of Anthropology Department for their constructive suggestions at my pre-submission seminar.

I am also thankful to the University Grants Commission for granting me financial support for the present study.
