Acknowledgement

It was during my brief stint with CHILDLINE India Foundation as a research consultant I came across the issue with reintegration of children in conflict with law which not only challenged me as a professional but also helped me realize social prejudices deeply rooted in the mindset of the duty bearers. I am thankful to CHILDLINE India Foundation for an opportunity that eventually led to this research work.

I am in debt with my guide Dr. Vijay Raghavan who not only mentored me on technical aspects but has helped me to keep up my motivation during the challenging process of this research. Without his support this research wouldn’t have been possible.

I must acknowledge the support and guidance provided by the members of the Doctoral Advisory Committee (DAC) Dr. Anil Sutar and Dr. Neela Dabir. Their constructive critic helped me remain focused, disciplined and consistent in my efforts.

Any research needs support from the administration. I sincerely acknowledge the support extended by Dr. Surinder Jaiswal and her office. I am thankful to Anil Datar, Susheela, Purnima and all staff of Doctoral Office of TISS, IT department and Library, especially Mr Mallikarjun for providing extra ordinary support on remote access.

Research is indeed an exhaustive exercise and only friends can make it an enjoyable journey. It would have been difficult to collect data had my friends like Arghya Mukherjee and his wife who eased the process of my data collection in Jharkhand by providing logistical support. Friends and professionals like Roop Sen, Uma Chatterjee, Dr. Bipasha Roy and Mr Joydeb Majumdar made extraordinary efforts in making data available and agreeing to give me interviews at all unearthly hours and holidays.

Having been travelling through four countries all through this work I consider myself lucky to have been blessed with extremely supportive colleagues and friends who kept me updated about all latest developments in the institute.

How can I not mention my wonderful family? Without support of my ever-understanding husband Mr Ashish Damle who stood by me at every point of time this research wouldn’t have been possible. My little son Ananway not only showed his maturity by bearing all my mood swings but also helped me chasing the dream that we shared together. No words are enough to thank him. My parents had always been extremely supportive all through the process by not only encouraging me but also extending special support to my family during my long distance field visits.
My research wouldn’t have been possible without the continued support and trust shown by Government officials at every step who were required to give me permission to visit observation homes and interview other Government officials. Special mention goes to Dr. PM Nair, Mr. Supekar, judicial magistrate Mr. Kishore Choudhary in Pune and others in Kolkata and Mumbai.

This work is an outcome of contributions made by institutions and individuals who have been tirelessly working in the field of juvenile justice in India. The list is long and therefore I like to thank them all for providing me access, time and all useful information. I am grateful to each and every one of them and especially to Vijay Johri who readily agreed to meet me even on weekends, understanding the limited time I had whenever I travelled to India. He also made efforts to arrange interviews with reintegrated children whenever I requested him.

Lastly I am indebted of all my respondents. I received overwhelming rejoinder from respondents who shared their stories and experiences without any hesitation and with all time that it needed.
