ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Looking back, I am surprised and at the same time very grateful for all I have received throughout these years. It has certainly shaped me as a person and has led me where I am now. All these years of PhD studies are full of such gifts.

In the first place I would like to thank the Almighty for His continuing shower of blessings, which enabled me to accomplish this task with all its phases of ups and downs.

Next I would like to record my gratitude and indebtedness to my respected teacher and supervisor Prof. Abdul Wahab for his advice, guidance, and crucial contribution which made him the backbone of this research and so to this thesis. His involvement with his originality has triggered and nourished my intellectual maturity that I will benefit from, for a long time to come. Above all and the most needed, he provided me unflinching encouragement and support without which the length of the systematic and organized plan of study, the breadth of view, and supremely the deep study of my research work would have been impossible. I am indebted to him more than he knows.

Besides my supervisor, my sincere thanks are due to Prof. Ashok Mittal, the Chairman, Department of Economics, AMU for providing all the necessary administrative support during the course of this work, I would also like to thank all my respected Teachers and Non-Teaching staff of Dept. of Economics, AMU and my student colleagues, for their encouragement, insightful comments, and hard questions.
I am thankful to Mr. Buniyad Ali Seminar librarian, Dept. of Economics, AMU for provision of the required materials. I am also obliged to all the staff members of Maulana Azad Library, Aligarh, NCAER, New Delhi and staff of central library, JNU, New Delhi for assisting me in many different ways.

It is absolutely impossible to acknowledge all my friends who at various levels extended their help and support. In return I can only offer my heartiest thanks to all of them individually for their best wishes.

Where would I be without my family? My parents deserve special mention for their inseparable support and prayers. They bore me, raised me, supported me, taught me, and loved me. To them I dedicate this thesis. Special thanks are also due to my lovable brothers and sisters for their colossal support, encouragement and great source of inspiration.

Words fail me to express my appreciation to my husband Syed Mansoor for his endless patience and moral support when it was most required. I am also grateful to his family for their thoughtful support.

Finally, I would like to thank everybody who was important to the successful realization of this thesis, as well as expressing my apology that I could not mention personally one by one.
