ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

During the whole period of this work I had to pass through extreme financial difficulties and it is only due to the generosity and kindness of my supervisor and many other patrons that I could complete my research.

In the interim period I always had to serve some institutions to earn money so that I could pull on with the work. I am indebted to the authorities of the Women's Training College, Raivalagh, Agra for giving me a job of a temporary lecturer in 1959-60 and again this year (1960) to Shri Shantinath Dhamma, President and Manager, K.O.K. College, Meerut, for his kindness to give me a job of a lecturer in Psychology. I could get the above jobs only due to the influence and generosity of my supervisor.

I am greatly indebted to the authorities of D.A.V., B.B., and Faizabad Inter Colleges of Aligarh and their students who acted as subjects with extreme interest and co-operation.

My indebtedness to Professor P. R. Vernon, the former tutor of my supervisor, knows no bounds. It is he who practically remained always behind the battle of the present investigation and continuously encouraged me through my supervisor to get the present work complete. It was his kindness and generosity that he allowed my supervisor to use his tests, namely (i) Vernon's Graded Arithmetic-Mathematics Tests, (ii) Vernon's Non-Verbal 'g', (iii) Vernon's Block Design, and (iv) Barth Vernon's Pattern Drawing, in the present investigation under special conditions that I would not publish the results without the permission of my supervisor or use the tests anywhere except in the present investigation. Moreover, he was kind enough to approve the planning of the research framed by the supervisor, through correspondence and suggested useful statistical techniques wherever necessary.
I most sincerely thank Messrs. University of London Press Ltd. for giving the permission to the supervisor as Editor of the Indian Psychological Bulletin to print a limited copies of Professor Vernon's Graded Arithmetic-Mathematics tests for use in the present investigation.

I am indebted to Professor J.C. Raven who gave six copies of Progressive Matrices to my supervisor. Without this help Matrices could not be included in this investigation.

I am immensely grateful to Dr. H.Lovell, author of Educational Psychology and Children and a disciple of Professor P.K. Vernon, who also gave several tests and allied materials to my supervisor for the present investigation.

I also acknowledge my sincerest thanks to Shri S.M. Nair, B.A. and Mr. Agrawal for typing my Thesis.

I express my heart felt gratitude to the authorities of Aligarh Muslim University for awarding me the free studentship and other facilities enabling me to carry on this work.

I must not forget my unlimited sense of indebtedness to Professor M. Usmanuddin, Dean Faculty of Arts and Head of the Department of Psychology, Aligarh Muslim University, whose generosity and encouragement throughout the period enabled me to bring the work to a successful completion. It would ever have remained a dream for me to think of submitting the Thesis to the University crossing over innumerable hurdles of regulations, had I not been patronised at various crucial moments by this old and world famous philosopher-psychologist who is an authority of Al Gainali too. His love and learning I have enjoyed many many years during my studentship in the University. But his exact feeling towards me I could see only when I informed him that I completed the work.
Last of all I must pay my tribute to my supervisor, Dr. K. Ray-Choudhury, Editor, Indian Psychological Bulletin, Department of Psychology, Aligarh Muslim University. He always showed keen interest in my work. Had he not been a man of international relations, it would have been impossible for me to get various standard tests and other necessary co-operation from various psychologists and publishers. I am ever indebted to him for his affection and unshakable faith in me to extent that he entrusted me with an important and intricate problem like that in the present investigation. I was so much inspired with his intellectual height and masterly grasp of his subject, rigid with Vernonian psychology from all aspects that I forgot all my limitations to study this problem. I am indebted to him for planning the research. Those who are acquainted with his subtle touch in Psychology and Statistical techniques will at once recognize the amount of help I have received in the present work. His intellectual depth and charming manners of his personality kept me in suspense throughout this period of my research to follow this problem with the intellectual pursuit after his own orientation. Whatever psychological techniques I have learned are all due to his coaching. A big problem that lies in front of me is how well I can practise them in my future life. I do not know how impress in words my indebtedness to such a Tutor of mine more than what I have done with little knowledge of English I have.

Amarnath Ray-Choudhury.
