I am extremely grateful to Professor O.P. Govil who suggested this topic and has helped me unstintingly throughout my research. I owe my thanks to Professor K.S. Misra for his valuable advice in giving the final touches to this thesis. I wish to thank my colleagues as well as Dr. H.V. Nema, Dr. R. Agarwal, Dr. (Mrs.) M. Agarwal, Dr. M.D. Khan and Rev. Trevor Almeida for the various ways in which they helped me. Thanks are due to Mr. Rizwanuddin Khan, Seminar Librarian, Department of English, and to Mr. N.U. Burney of Maulana Azad Library, for the help they readily and unfailingly extended to me in using both these libraries. I am extremely grateful to The British Council Library, New Delhi and the British Library Photocopy Service for books and reprints of articles. I am indebted to Mr. A. Kamal and Mr. Unni K. for their unsolicited help in the rough typing of the thesis.

This work could not have been possible without the help and cooperation of my husband, Dr. Kailash Nath, who freed me from all mundane responsibilities to enable me to apply myself single-mindedly to my study. My children, Rattan, Jyotsna and Satish have been a great help to me in my venture, for they sent me books and material from the U.S.A. The submission of this work is, and its success would be, a wish fulfilment of my parents. My father, Mr. C.S. Bhatnagar, encouraged me by typing out the very first draft of the first few chapters. The consciousness of the fact that my mother left for her heavenly abode before I could complete my work saddens me. I, however, feel sure that her unseen presence and her blessings have all along been with me in my endeavour.
