ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I have great pleasure in recording my deep sense of gratitude to Mr Iqbal Ahmed, Reader, Department of English, under whose supervision I completed this thesis on the dramatic technique of five stage-plays of Samuel Beckett. I was fortunate to be associated with him.

I heartily thank Professor Maqbool Hasan Khan, Chairman, Department of English, for his invaluable advice and help. Special gratitude is due to Professor Wiqar Hussain for his encouragement when the thesis was in its preliminary stages, and to Professor K.S. Misra for material on Beckett and his able and experienced guidance.

Particular acknowledgment is made of the readiness with which the British Council Library and its Staff at New Delhi was forthcoming with its reading material on Beckett. Its response to requests for books on Beckett to be sent for study to Aligarh was immediate.

But all the while it was my family that indulged me. My parents Mr & Mrs Rifa’t Al-udayli and brothers Muhammed, Umar, and Firas, as well as sisters Mrs Ahmed, Mrs Nabeel, and Miss Kholood, extended full financial and moral support.

Friends were persistent backers. Aleem Bhai, Nedal Ashraf, Ayman, Javed, Dr. Asim Siddiqui, and cousin Osama always sustained me.

Special thanks are due to Mr Shoaib Ahmad of the M/s Micro Services Centre, Aligarh for the wordprocessing and laser printing of this manuscript, done well in time.
