(b) if the petitions are presented to different district courts the petition presented later shall be transferred to the district court in which the earlier petition was presented and both the petitions shall be heard and disposed of together by the district court in which the earlier petition was presented.

(3) In a case where clause (b) of sub-section (2) applies, the court or the Government, as the case may be, competent under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 to transfer any suit or proceeding from the district court in which the later petition has been presented to the district court in which the earlier petition is pending, shall exercise its powers to transfer such later petition as if it had been empowered so to do under the said Code.

40B. Special provision relating to trial and disposal of petitions under the Act: (1) The trial of a petition under this Act shall, so far as is practicable consistently with the interests of justice in respect of the trial, be continued from day to day until its conclusion, unless the court finds the adjournment of the trial beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded.

(2) Every petition under this Act shall be tried as expeditiously as possible and endeavour shall be made to conclude the trial within six months from the date of service of notice of the petition on the respondent.

(3) Every appeal under this Act shall be heard as expeditiously as possible, and endeavour shall be made to conclude the hearing within three months from the date of service of notice of appeal on the respondent.

40C. Documentary evidence: Notwithstanding anything contained in any enactment to the contrary, no document shall be admissible in evidence in any proceeding at the trial of a petition under this Act on the ground that it is not duty stamped or registered.

39. Special provision as to pending cases: (1) All Petitions and proceedings in causes and matters matrimonial which are pending in any court at the commencement of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976, shall be dealt with and decided by such court-

(i) if it is a petition or proceeding under the Hindu Marriage Act, then so far as may be, as if it had been originally instituted therein under the Hindu Marriage Act, as amended by this Act;

(ii) if it is a petition or proceeding under the Special Marriage Act, then so far as may be, as if it had been originally instituted therein under the Special Marriage Act, as amended by this Act.

(2) In every petition or proceeding to which sub-section (1) applies, the court in which the petition or proceeding is pending shall give an opportunity to the parties to amend the pleadings, in so far as such amendment is necessary to give effect to the provisions of sub-section (1), within such time as it may allow in this behalf and any such amendment may include an amendment for conversion of a petition or proceeding for judicial separation into a petition or proceeding, as the case may be, for divorce.

THE DIOLUTION OF MUSLIM MARRIAGES ACT, 1939

ACT NO. VIII OF 1939

Passed the Indian Legislature

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 17 March. 1939

(Published in the Gazette of India dated the 25th

March, 1939)

An Act to consolidate and clarify the provisions of Muslim law relating to suits for dissolution of marriage by women married under Muslim law and to remove doubts as to the effect of the renunciation of Islam by a married Muslim woman on her married tie.

The Hanafi law is very favourable to women in many matters but in a few cases it involves great hardship to women. To overcome this difficulty, the Hinafi jurist have evolved the rule that in case of necessity a Hanafi case may be decided according to the law of another set Sunnis.

This important rule was not followed by the Anglo Indian

Courts with the result that sometimes the Hanafi wives were put to great hardship. Thus a marriage cannot be dissolved when the husband is guilty of cruelty, desertion etc. The Ulema of pre-partition India felt the need for the reform of the enforcible law. At their instance the late Moulvi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi, Advocate, M.L.A. and a member of the Working Committee of the Jamit al-Ulama-i-Hind introduced a Bill in 1938 in the Legislative Assembly. It was passed with a few changes in 1939. It proved of immense help to the Muslim women and has been adopted by the Government of Pakistan. Certain charges have to be made in it to make it more useful.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate and clarify the provisions of Muslim law relating to suits for dissolution of marriage by the women married under Muslim Law and to remove doubts as to the effect of the renunciation of Islam by a married Muslim woman on her marriage tie. It is hereby enacted as follows:

The Hanafi law is generally very favourable to women but in a few cases it involves great hardship to women. Thus there is no provision in it to dissolve a marriage when the husband treats his wife with cruelty, deserts her or does not maintain her. The Qadi can only admonish or imprison him but cannot dissolve the marriage. This and other similar matters resulted in great hardship to women. To overcome such difficulties the Hanafi jurists evolved the rule that in case of necessity a Hanafi Qadi could send a case to a Malik, Shafi'i or Hanbali Qazi to be decided according to his own law which allows the dissolution of marriage or grant other relief in such cases. The British India Courts could not adopt this measure as there were no separate Courts for different Muslim sects nor did they themselves have recourse to this procedure. The result was that many Muslim women experienced great hardship. The Muslim Ulama realized this difficulty and at the instance of the Jamiat-al-i-Hind, the late Mohammad Ahmad Kazimi, a member of the Working Committee of the Jamiat and a member of the Legislative Assembly introduced a Bill in 1938 which after some modification was passed in 1993. It has proved of immense help to Muslim women and is in force in India and Pakistan. The Pakistan Government has made a few changes in it to make it more useful.

1. Short title and extent. This Act may be called the Dissolution of Muslim Marriage Act, 1939.

2. It extends to all the provinces and the capital of the federation. A woman married under Muslim Law shall be entitled to obtain a decree for the dissolution of the marriage on any one or more of the following grounds, namely—of (1) that the whereabouts of the husband have not been known for a period of four years.

Under the Hanafi law a missing person could be presumed to be dead after a minimum period of sixty years from the time of his disappearance. The Indian Evidence Act, of 1872 prescribed the period of seven years when a person could be presumed to be dead. The Hanafi wives could take advantage of this provision of law. But this period of seven years was also found to be too long in view of the changed conditions of the times. Hence advantage was taken of the Hanafi rule to adopt the law of another Sunni sect in case of hardship.

This is the Maliki law and has been adopted in the Act to provide adequate relief to wives whose husbands are missing. This provision was suitable for ancient times when means of communication were difficult and a long time was necessary to trace a missing person. With the great facilities in communication now available, the period of four years is too long and may with advantage be reduced to two years.

(ii) That the husband has neglected or has failed to provide for her maintenance for a period of two years;

(ii-a) That the husband has taken an additional wife in the contravention of the provisions of the Muslim Family Laws Ordinance, 1961;

(iii) That the husband has been sentenced to imprisonment for a period of seven years or upwards.

The period of seven years is too long. How can a young wife be deprived of the society of her husband for such a long time. For discussion of this aspect, see Ila and Zihar. It seems desirable to reduce the period of seven years to two years as in the case of Clause ii.

(iv) That the husband has failed to perform, without reasonable cause, his marital obligation for a period of three years;

There seems to be no justification to fix the period at three years and the period of two years may be substituted for it. For discussion, see Chapter 23 "Other Grounds".

(v) That the husband was impotent at the time of marriage and continues to be so;

(vi) That the husband has been insane for a period of two years or is suffering from leprosy or a virulent venereal disease.

Provided that after such renunciation, or conversion the woman shall be entitled to obtain a decree for the dissolution of her marriage on any of the ground mentioned in section2:

Provided further that provisions of this section shall not apply to a woman converted to Islam from some other faith who re-embraces her former faith.

Opinions differed about the effect of apostasy of the wife. The majority of Muslim jurists expressed that the marriage shall be dissolved on the wife's apostasy but some jurists held otherwise. This sub-clause has adopted the latter view.

Rights to Dower not to be affected,—Nothing contained in this Act shall affect any right which a married woman may have under Muslim law to her dower or any part thereof on the dissolution of marriage.

Repeal of section 5 of Act XXVI of 1937.—Section 5 of the Muslim Personal Law (Shariat) Application Act, 1937 is hereby repealed.

THE MUSLIM FAMILY LAWS ORDINANCE, 1961

The Dissolution of Muslim Marriages Act, 1939, had provided great relief to Muslim wives but there was a great demand that some more safeguards were necessary and that it was also necessary that the cases under the Act be decided speedily. The Pakistan Government set up a Law Commission to go into the matter. The Commission consisted of seven members one of whom represented the Ulama. It submitted its report on 1st June, 1956. Maulana Ehtishamul Haq submitted a separate dissenting report. The majority recommended that there should be compulsory registration of marriages and divorce and a standard Nikahnama be prescribed. It also stated that child-marriages should be prevented by law and that pronouncement of three divorces at a single sitting should be considered to amount to one divorce only. It also recommended that the judges trying matrimonial cases should try to bring about a reconciliation between the parties. The Commission also said that permission to take a second wife should not be given unless the applicant was in a position to support both wives and his children in the standard of living to which the family was accustomed and that the husband shall have to pay the Meher agreed upon however high it might be. In the absence of specification the whole dower shall be payable on demand. The Commission also recommended that the wife could claim maintenance for the past three years. The Commission also suggested the establishment of Matrimonial Courts which shall decide a case within three months. Maulana Sahib and other Ulama did not agree with most of the views of the Commission. Their objection may be summarised as under:

"There is no priest-hood in Islam so that no Nikah-khwans can be appointed by the Government. Registration of marriages is useful but even then it should not be made compulsory. It may result in inconvenience while the presence of witnesses and solemnization of marriage in public adequately serve the purpose.

Fixation of age at 18 years for the bridegroom and 15 years for the bride is uncalled for. Shariat has not fixed such ages and none need be fixed now. To discourage child-marriages we must educate people.

The pronouncement of three divorces at one time: The majority of Muslim jurists consider that the pronouncement of three divorces at one time amounts to three divorces. To remove the disadvantages following such practices, Muslims should be taught the proper method of divorce. Polygamy has been allowed by Islam and practised by the Holy Prophet (Peace be on him) and his Companions. It is not necessary to obtain the permission of any authority for the second, third or fourth marriage of a man. It is also unnecessary.

The enactment about the payment of dower fixed how high it may be is unreasonable. The parties may have recourse to arbitration."

The report was not given effect to until 1961 when certain recommendations were given effect to. This is the background of the Ordinance of 1961.

DIVORCE REFORM ACT, 1969

The Act came into force on 1st January, 1971. It has introduced radical changes in the English law of divorce. It has introduced divorce by mutual consent and even unilateral divorce with certain safeguards for the respondent. It is necessary for divorce by mutual consent that the parties should have lived apart for a minimum period of two years and the consent of a party should not have been obtained by misleading him or her. As regards unilateral divorce, it is necessary that (1) the parties should have lived apart for a period of five years 2(e) the dissolution of the marriage would not result in grave hardship, financial or otherwise, to the respondent. The Court will also take into consideration the interest of the children and other persons concerned. The respondent can also plead that it would in all circumstances be wrong to dissolve the marriage 4(2) (b). The court will also take into consideration the financial position of the respondent, 6(1) (b). It will also consider certain other matters specified in section 6(2).

Divorce Reform Act, 1969

An Act to amend the grounds for divorce and judicial separation; to facilitate reconciliation in matrimonial causes; and for purposes connected with the matters of aforesaid.

(22nd October 1969).

BE IT ENACTED by the Queen's Most Excellent
Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. After the commencement of this Act the sole ground on which a petition for divorce may be presented to the court by either party to a marriage shall be that the marriage has broken down irretrievably.

Before the passing of the new Act, there were several grounds on which a divorce could be obtained. This Act prescribes only one ground on which a divorce can now be granted. But the section is so exhaustive that it includes every conceivable ground for separation; the only condition being that it should have led to the irretrievable breaking up of the marriage. The next section describes the condition on the basis of which a marriage may be considered to have broken down.
