ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am deeply grateful to my supervisor Prof. E.N. Lall, Former Head of the Department of English, North-Eastern Hill University, Shillong, who provided wise and caring guidance throughout my research which helped me overcome many hurdles in my work. He was also considerate enough to correct my untyped manuscripts which were invariably written in an almost undecipherable minuscule handwriting. No supervisor could have been more considerate, patient and helpful. My gratitude also goes to Mrs. Lall for her unfailing hospitality during my visits to their home.

I am also grateful to the Government of Nagaland for granting me study leave for three years and the subsequent earned leave. These leaves enabled me to devote myself fully to my research work in Shillong. I am highly indebted to the Rt. Rev. Abraham Alangimattathil, Bishop of Kohima, who—through his contacts abroad in his Salesian Congregation—helped me to obtain from U.K. and U.S.A. most of the books I needed for my work.

I would like to thank Dr. K.C. Joseph Kurisoomootil, Department of English, North-Eastern Hill University, Kohima Campus, for introducing me to the works of C.S. Lewis and for having encouraged me to work on the author for my dissertation.
I wish to express particular thanks to all my colleagues in the Department of English, Science College, Kohima for looking after the Department during my long absence, especially Mrs. Chubatola, Mrs. Nina Kire and Mrs. Amenla who had to do the additional work of the Head of the Department. Many thanks also to the Librarian and staff of the NEHU Central Library, Nongthymmai, Shillong, for their friendly and efficient service.

For typing the manuscripts and putting the dissertation in its final form Mr. Godfrey Pathaw deserves special thanks. He did a fine job for me.

Most importantly my wife Nichuvono and my children Niselie, Atsono and Akhotso deserve my warmest gratitude for their spirit of sacrifice as often they had to live for days, weeks and months without a husband and father for the last five years.

Shillong,
the 18th December, 1997
