Acknowledgements

During the study and compilation of the thesis, I have received generous support and encouragement from a large number of people, who, in variety of ways have contributed to the completion of this academic assignment, but for whom I would not have been able to give a shape to this work. No words can express my indebtedness to them; still let me place on record my gratitude and gratefulness in one word “NAMASYANTASCHA”

At the outset, I would like to thank profusely my research guide Dr. P.T. Raveendran, Professor and former Head, Department of Management Studies, Kannur University for his constant involvement, valuable support, suggestions and especially for his generous and patient supervision throughout my PhD candidature.

I extend my sincere gratitude to Dr. K.M. Navas, Managing Trustee of KMCT Group of educational institutions, Kozhikode for having permitted me to keep away from KMCT School of Business for days and weeks together to carry out this research work, in spite of the basic need of the presence of Dean in the institution. But for him, I would neither have undertaken nor completed this research project.

I would also like to thank my colleagues at KMCT School of Business and professional friends from industries and other organizations, who helped me to improve the contents of this work by giving their dear suggestions. I will fail in my duties if I do not mention the names of some of my colleagues in my profession like Dr. P. Raju of University of Calicut, Dr. K.K. Saxena, of Haryana Agricultural University, Mrs. N.K. Shamla, Research Scholar, Kannur University, and Mrs. Sajithamony, of SNGIST, all of whom extended their full support, cooperation and suggestions during the statistical analysis process of this research. Thanks to all for finding time to go through my thesis chapters during their own very busy and successful academic lives. I am also thankful to Prof. P.R. Poduval, Former Director of School of Management Studies of CUSAT for having spared his valuable time for giving advice on various aspects of the study often.

Let me take this opportunity to express my sincere special thanks to the CEOs, HR Managers and Training Managers of different Organizations, who helped me wholeheartedly by arranging the brainstorming and interview sessions as part of my data collection in their respective organizations on different occasions. It was a pleasure to get to know all of them and their colleagues and employees. Thanks for sharing their journey with me. They made the herculean task of data collection process so much fun.

To all the authors whose publications I have read in preparation for this thesis: thanks for sharing the research work and publications. Their ideas have greatly influenced my learning. While this thesis cites but a tiny fraction of the literature which I read in its preparation, I thank all of them for the insights shared through their published work — to quote a phrase from Google Scholar, this thesis ‘stand[s] on the shoulders of giants’. Many thanks to such giants!

Last, but not least; I thank my wife Valsala for her continuous encouragement, support and perseverance to pursue my research work, in spite of various odds. Her patience and understanding were the source of my strength, with the Grace of The Almighty.

Doing good to the fellow-beings is the practical religion of the man full of love –

Swami Vivekananda.

Palayad Prof. V.Gopakumar

8.12.2010