ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The debts I incurred in writing this thesis are manifold, not merely to the distinguished critics and novelists whose ideas I have used and whose names and works are listed in the Bibliography, but primarily I must place on record my gratitude to my Supervisor, Dr. Noorul Hasan, Head of the Department of English. My interest in Golding infact began in the University while doing Lord of the Flies, under him. At various stages of its preparation this thesis has been read by him; to him I owe suggestions that have been of inestimable value to me and from his interest and perceptive observations, I have drawn much encouragement and profit.

I recall with gratitude the constant help given to me by friends. In this connection, I would like to mention John Biswas who took the trouble of posting me relevant books all the way from New York. To A. Guha, for lending me books and for many stimulating conversations about the author we both admire. To Sabita for her help and friendship. I must also place on record, my gratitude to the following libraries from whom I received considerable assistance in my search for relevant Golding material.

a) N.E.H.U. Library, Rabindra Nath Tagore Library, Shillong
b) British Council, National Library and American Library, Calcutta.

Finally, most writings are done in houses and although I realize such personal debts remain unrepayable, I'd like to thank my parents and my family for their loving support.
sustaining love and patience. I sincerely thank my sister Mrs. Rowena Biswas for her untiring diligence and ability to understand my scrawl and type this thesis.

Above all, I remain eternally indebted to GOD whose constant presence has been a source of abiding joy and encouragement, in my pursuit of higher studies.

In closing, I’d like to say with Montaigne: "I have here gathered a posy of other men’s flowers, and only the thread that binds them is mine own.”.
