ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am immensely grateful to my supervisor Prof. K.C. Baral for his painstaking guidance, encouragement and understanding. The combination of Bakhtin and Narayan was indeed exhilarating, and entirely Prof. Baral’s ingenuity, working on which turned out to be the most rewarding experience for me.

I am also grateful to the respected teachers of the English Department, NEHU, for their encouragement.

I would acknowledge the help of IACIS, Hyderabad (neé ASRC) for providing me with almost the entire bulk of Bakhtin’s works, as also the library of CIEFL (Regional Centre, Shillong) for various references.

The authority of Karimganj College and my colleagues of the English Department owe my gratitude, for they have borne my absence with patience and grace.

I would also thank the UGC for allowing me Teacher Fellowship for two years facilitating the completion of the work.

I fondly remember my respected teachers in Visva Bharati, Santiniketan from Class V to MA, who taught me to merge life with learning.

It would be a sacrilege to forget to thank Mr. Godfrey Pathaw, whose expertise in typing concretized my thesis.

My love and gratitude to my little son for depicting such wise understanding and even encouraging me to complete my thesis in moments of frustration.

My gratitude to my husband for overlooking my absentmindedness and periods of nervous dejection, and for buoying me up with all practical and psychological support.

A mother’s debt cannot be repaid. Throughout my life, it is my mother who inspired me to aspire for the noble. Disregarding her pressing medical problems, she took care of my son to allow me opportunity to work. I cannot thank her, and hence will not attempt to.

And to my beloved father who is in heaven, who had guarded me like an angel during his life time, do I offer my humble thesis in love and gratitude.

September 11, 2002

SRAVANI BISWAS

SRAVANI BISWAS