ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

At the outset, I bow down my head in respect to owe the success of this work to my guide Professor M. N. Karna, Head, Department of Sociology, North-Eastern Hill University, Shillong. In spite of his heavy schedule he had spared much time and energy to help and advise me, patiently reviewing and re-reviewing the scripts, putting his ideas and suggestions in shaping my thesis and made it possible for submission in time. It was but for his selfless devotion that this work was accomplished.

I extend my heartfelt gratitude and thanks to the members of the Evaluation Committee, Dr. Lanu Aier, Reader, Department of Sociology and Dr. Khakchang Debbarma, Sr. Lecturer, Department of Political Science, for their invaluable suggestions extended to me during the pre-submission seminar. I owe them greatly for the success of this work.

My sincere appreciation and thanks go to the members of Teaching Faculty of the Department of Sociology for their inspiration and support towards me throughout my research work. I would also like here to thank the clerical staff of the Department for their timely help in every stage of my research work.

Besides, many people, friends and family members alike have directly or indirectly contributed to the success of this work. Among them Mrs. Rose Marry Debbarma, Koko Debbarma, Nono Debbarma and their wonderful family for their hospitality and various helps extended to me. They have not only supported and encouraged me but they have also provided me with ‘a Home away from Home’ throughout my prolong stayed in Shillong to which I am greatly indebted to. Dr. N.P. Goel, Department of Geography, in helping at various stages of my work, Mrs. Kamlesh Goel, Rynjah, for typing and printing out the thesis in time for submission. Thungjamo Tsopoe, Ph.D. Research Scholar, Department of Anthropology for helping me in tabulation and in many other works, Nzanbemo Lotha, Ph.D. Scholar, Department of Sociology, J. Orenthung Humtsoe, Department of Bio-Chemistry, for their help in various ways. My brother Mhathung Patton and sister Mrs. Nzano, and also my brother-in-law Abemo Jungio, for their help and support extended to me during the various stages of my research work. To my dear loving parents, brothers, sisters and parents-in-laws for their constant support and encouragement. All these people have contributed in their own ways to the success of this work and for which I am thankful to them.

I shall be failing on my part if I don’t mention to thank the Department of School Education, Government of Nagaland for granting me study leave, without which this work would not have undertaken at all. And of course, to the people and various organisations I have interviewed and interacted in one stage or the other during the course of my field work without whose cooperation this work would not have been accomplished.
Last but not the least, I dedicate the success of this work to my beloved wife Mrs. Zuchobeni and my two little daughters Noyingro and Pipiro for their understanding, cooperation and prayer through which this work was accomplished in time.

Dated Shillong,

The 1st Dec. 1999.
