ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I intend to express here my deep sense of gratitude for those who have helped me in various ways in completing the dissertation. At the outset, I would like to thank my supervisors, Dr. Pravat Kumar Kuri and Professor Sugata Marjit for their patience, support and guidance during my doctoral thesis. I received immense help on every step right from the outset of this work from them. Despite their busy schedule both Dr. Kuri and Professor Marjit made themselves available whenever I wanted to talk to them. While Professor Marjit has taught me how to write the chapters with a unifying thematic link, I have learnt from Dr. Kuri the art of maintaining a logical sequence while preparing the thesis.

It is at this stage I should convey my thanks to the Indian Council of Social Science Research for the Ph.D fellowship awarded to me through the Centre. Apart from the fund, it is this fellowship that tied me up with Professor Marjit on the one hand and Dr. Kuri on the other. The fellowship enabled me to conduct a full time research with a peaceful mind.

I have interacted for a considerable period of time with Professor Pinaki Chakrabarti of University of Burdwan. and gathered some conceptual issues in this topic. In fact, he was Professor Chakrabarti who initiated me into the subject and spent a lot of time during my work at the early stage. I have received countless valuable comments from Professor R.N. Bhattacharya, now a Visiting Fellow of Centre for Studies in Social Sciences, Calcutta. He has reviewed one of my papers during a workshop organised by the University of Burdwan in the year 2007. I shall remain grateful to him for providing me with so many new insights.

Thanks are due to Dr. Jyotsna Jalan, Dr. Manabi Majumder, Dr. Pranab Kumar Das and Dr. Saibal Kar of Centre for Studies in Social Sciences, Calcutta (CSSSC) for their thoughtful as well as critical comments during my annual presentations. I have learnt a few basic requirements for carrying out an empirical research from their comments and suggestions. I have also found some ideas from Dr. Rajarshi Mazumder, Dr.Soumendu Kishore Dutta, Dr.Atanu Sengupta and Professor Kaushik Gupta while presenting my papers and thereafter.
I have worked as a Ph.D intern in the World Institute for Development Economics Research (WIDER), Helsinki, Finland in the year 2006 in a project called “Gender Inequality and Food Security”. It was a part of my Ph.D program. I have immensely benefited by interacting with the WIDER’s faculty during my stay. Especially, I would like to give my heartfelt thanks to my project director Professor Basudeb Guha-Khasnobis but for whom I would not have completed my paper successfully in the WIDER. I shall also convey my thanks to the WIDER’s Senior Research Fellow Professor Marc. Mcgillivray who had offered some well thought out suggestions during my presentation.

At various stages of my work I have consulted with Professor Achin Chakrabarti of Institute of Development Studies Kolkata. He has put forward his own ideas about one of my chapters and I found it extremely pertinent. I am quite indebted to Dr. Sushil Halder of Jadavpur University who has shared his own experience on some aspects of the thesis and informed me about some technical nitty gritties.

During my work with the thesis I have presented my chapters in various forums and seminars for several occasions. To start with, I would like to mention the Annual Conference of Global Development Network (GDN) in 2008 where, after my presentation I have found some brilliant comments from the chairperson along with other participants and august audiences in Brisbane. Then, I must mention the conference organised by the South Asian Meeting of Econometric Society (SAMES) held in Chennai (December 2006) where a number of critical comments came from Dr. Abhirup Mukhopadhayay of ISI, Delhi along with other participants. I have accordingly taken notes of those suggestions in due course. The project meeting of WIDER had been jointly organised by the CSSSC and WIDER at about the same time in CSSSC’s campus where the audience critically appreciated my paper and I got a few alternative suggestions from them. I am quite happy to convey my gratitude towards the conference participants and WIDER for providing the scope of presenting my paper.

I am quite thankful to the librarian and other staff of CSSSC library, for their generous help by searching a number of valuable papers, reports etc. for me. Special thanks must also be conveyed to the librarian of WIDER who, only for my requirement, borrowed papers and books from some other library in Helsinki and kindly provided me with them in no time. This note would remain incomplete if I fail to appreciate the outstanding support that I have come across and enjoyed throughout the entire period of work on my Ph.D thesis from the library and its staff of State Institute of Panchayats and Rural Development (SIPRD), Kalyani. I am grateful to Dr. D.K. Ghose, the then Senior Research Officer of that institute, who in spite of his hectic schedule kindly found time and helped me out whenever I approached him. At the same time I must convey my gratitude to Mr. Sumit Kumar Gupta, a faculty member of the institute, who has made me aware of a number of basic techniques about data handling and computation. My research would not have been completed but for some exceptional help from Shri Nilanjana Jana and Shri Himadri Chakrabarti of the library, at Kalyani.

In fine, I would like to mention about the constant support that I have received from my parents, my parents-in-law, and other members of the family. My wife Smt. Debasree Mukhopadhyay has taken up some added responsibility in regular life and nudged me quietly into the world of research so that I could concentrate entirely into it and complete the thesis without any sort of difficulty. I am quite happy to acknowledge her significant role.

In spite of all these help, if I have made any omission, I have only myself to blame!
