ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Words alone cannot express my appreciation for the opportunity or my indebtedness to the people whose constant guidance and assistance brought this research from an idea to a reality. However, at least words can give credit where credit is due. I consider it my pleasure to acknowledge all those individuals who contributed immensely to the completion of this research.

At the outset, I thank God Almighty for His providence and blessings during the journey of my intellectual pursuit. He was my stronghold and rock to give me the needed help.

I hereby record my profound and sincere gratitude and appreciation to R. Subramani, Ph.D., Assistant Professor, Department of Journalism and Mass Communication, Periyar University, who motivated, and encouraged me all through the research. The depth of his scholarship and the richness of his intellectual insight and comments enabled me again and again to be clear in the use of concepts and more rigorous in my analysis. I should like to say that he helped me in a myriad ways at every stage of the development of the research. His reviews have helped me a great deal to fine-tune the final write-up.

I wish to express my deep sense of reverence and gratitude to V. Natarajan, Ph.D., Professor and Head, Department of Journalism and Mass Communication, Periyar University, for his professional advice and consistent urge to help the budding scholars. The other faculty members also played a great role to help me focus on the research in an intellectual yet in a friendly manner.

A word of thanks weighs less but means a lot. I acknowledge my deep and sincere gratitude to Honourable Chairperson Dr. Jeppiar of Sathyabama University. His life and pages have enabled and inspired me to embark on a great expedition with the coastal people of our country. All along my tryst with the research he has been a stalwart model of godliness, strength and edification. I am indebted to J. Mariazeena Johnson Ph.D., Director of Sathyabama University for her sea-level generosity in granting required permission from the University, her judicious guidance and above all showing me the correct path when I faced challenging situations during the research. Inspired by her understanding heart for the poor and authentic lifestyle I was empowered to launch into this specialized research among the marginalized people of our country.

I should like to thank Dr. S. Arul Aram, Associate Professor Department of Media Sciences, Anna University, Chennai, who not only encouraged me to choose the topic of this particular research, but also graciously critiqued my analysis several times.

I honour and admire Dr. S. Nanda Kumar, Associate Professor, Department of Journalism and Mass Communication, Periyar University, who supported me all through the expedition of my research. I owe my sincere gratitude to Mr. Maa. Thamizhparuthi, Assistant Professor, Department of Journalism and Mass Communication, Periyar University. I wish to thank Dr. D.V. Nithyanandan for his contribution in minute correction of the texts.

Throughout this tough endeavour, the Department of Visual Communication in Sathyabama University especially Ms. Nazini, Head of the Department of Visual Communication and all my colleagues helped me with technical expertise and friendly suggestions respectively.

I wish to thank Dr. Arul Raj who not only graciously critiqued the methodology of the research but also provided me with the latest scientific model to evaluate the findings of the study. I am obliged to thank Sri. Dominic Roche and Sr. Jecintha who helped me courteously with suggestions on bettering my language. In addition to that, Ms. Sheba from Hyderabad EFL University of Foreign Languages has completed a tremendous task as an astute English language editor reading the entire manuscript and offering many helpful suggestions. I am sincerely grateful to Ms. Deivasree Anbu and her family for providing accommodation and their hospitality during my visit to Salem. I thank Mr. Shanmugam for his timely help.

I owe my sincere gratitude to all the participants who helped me formulate my concepts during the in-depth interviews. In fact, they broadened the perspective of the study. I feel privileged to express my deep sense of gratitude to my loving father A. Santhappan, my affectionate sisters Agnes, and Anusha, my brother Edward Savio along with my uncle Justin and Robert for their genuine encouragement and timely support throughout the research.

The library staff from the University of Chennai, Annamalai University, and Manonmanium University and the Swaminathan Institute of Chennai, are fondly remembered for their intellectual contributions and personal encouragement on various occasions. Finally, I stand in awe and wonder and thank the people in the coastal areas of Cuddalore. It is impossible to mention all the names of the wonderful people living there particularly fisherwomen. They have immensely contributed to this endeavour. The District Collector, community leaders of the village and the NGOs who shared a moment to tell their story. I salute them all at this moment of ending this remarkable journey.

Although I cannot list the enormous number of helpful people whom I met all across during my research, I recall them with utmost respect. Their passion and contributions articulate the content of this study.
