CONTENTS

Introduction - Synaesthesia and Rasa Siddhanta

Affective Theories

Influences on Richards - Chung-Yung - Coleridge - Plotinus - Coleridge's idea - Modern psychology - Sherrington's concept of integrative action - Aesthetic equilibrium Synaesthesia and Santa Rasa - Saiva Advaita

Chapter I Richards' Psychological Approach

Organisation of impulses in Richards - The poet - Organisation of experiences - Impulses - The field of stimulation - Responses - An order imposed - Imaginative power - Coleridge on Imagination - Empathy - The self and the non-self - Psychological Principles - Feelings - Coalescence of subject and object. The process, a mystery -

Chapter II Richards' Poetic Theory.

Emotive language and reader response - Pseudo statements - Two functions of language - Emotive language - Musical phrases - The intellectual and the emotional streams - Emotional attitudes - Communication, man a communicating animal - correspondence between experiences - Different theories - The vehicle of Communication - The facilities - The poet and the reader - Tolstoy on Art - Resolution effected - Poetry orders the mind - strata of a poem - subjectivity - Metaphor - Poise - Equanimity - Sources of misreading - Emotion - Ten sources of Misreading - Sense, feeling, tone, intention - The Sherrington model - Process of identification - The common path model - Interplay of impulses - Reflex action -
Unitary harmony - Synaesthesis - The theory of synaesthesia - Attention - Synaesthesis and Connaesthesia - Equilibrium and Harmony - The balance of impulses - Freedom - Chung-Yung -

Chapter III Dhvani and Rasa.

Rasa and Bhaavana - Verbal structure - Abhidha, Laksana, Vyanjana, Dhvani - Rasa dhvani - Asamlaksya Krama - Abhinava Gupta's dhvani theory - Three types of dhvani - Rasa Dhvani - Rasa sutra - Bhaava - Staayi Bhaava - Vyabhicaari Bhaava - Cognitive elements - Vibhaava - Anubhaava - Cognition - Rasa experience - The epistemological nature of rasa experience - Rasa is not a substance - Rasa is aprameya - Rasa as a process - Generalization or Sadharaniikaranam - The sahrudaya experience - Vaasana - Abhivyakti - Rasa applicable to all the arts - Bhaava and Rasa - Pattern of mental states - Bhaava complex - Dominant Staayibhaava - Staayibhaavaas are not Rasas - universalisation - The process of enjoyment - a psychological analysis -

Chapter IV Poetic Theories of Richards' and Abhinava Gupta.

Richards and Indian Aestheticians - The poet - Krantadarsî and Vaacaspati - Range, delicacy, freedom - The poetic process - Coleridge and Bharata - Empathy and vaasana - The self and the non self - The radiant self - Coleridge and Abhinava Gupta - The inherent structure - Bhaavana and vaasana - Rasa and sensation - Communication - Medium, Emotive language - Suggestive language - Referential language and Gunibhoota Vyangya. The poet and the reader - Sadharaniikaranam - Camatkaara - Vaasanas - A poem - a mental condition - Sources of misreading and vignas - ten sources of misreading - Seven vignas.

Chapter V Synaesthesis and Santa Rasa.

Chapter VI  Conclusion: Happy Similarity.

Equilibrium in Shakespeare's Tragedies - Psychological Dimensions - Coleridge and Richards - Comparison at Primary Level - Neo-Platonism and Saiva Advaita.