ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My sincerest thanks are due to the British Council Library, Madras, but for whose characteristic promptness in sending the whole stock on G.M. Hopkins from their library as well as procuring some other rare titles and xeroxed copies of Journal articles from the BLLD, Boston Spa, this slender volume devoted to the study of peculiarly fascinating Hopkins would have been impossible. In turn, apart from the xeroxed copies of rare journal articles (though costly for me) BLLD's supply of rarer books such as Todd K. Benders "G.M. Hopkins. The Classical Background and critical reception of his work" from Liverpool University, for use for a month needs special mention in this little space.

I heartily thank the Department of English, and the courteous and liberal library authorities of Sri Krishnadevaraya University, Anantapur.

Thanksgiving may seem too little in the case of the celebrated critics and scholars of Hopkins quoted here. Their criticisms have just become the jewels of my memory.

I will be failing in my duty if I do not gratefully mention Messrs. S. Gundu Rao, M.A., and T. Narasimha Murthy, B.Sc., two of the devoted band of my students.
who spend a whole fortune on good books, and in squeezing valuable books of well stocked institutions fight against dragons folded in the gate forbidding entrance-and thus help me.

To all others that have helped me directly or indirectly, I am deeply indebted.
