Acknowledgements

I am deeply grateful to my teacher (Professor Jimina TQshore with whom I started to think and work about the present thesis. She not only inspired me to take up this aspect of literature but also provided the much needed support, innumerable advises and invaluable training to work, on such endeavors. I attribute all the good things of this humble endeavor to her critical acumen. I can only express my gratitude for all that she has given me. I thank, the renowned psychoanalytic critic and eminent scholar of (English (professor [Norman N. "Holland of University of 'Florida for his valuable suggestions that helped me clarify various aspects of psychoanalytical studies of Shaw's plays.

I express my heartfelt thanks to my teacher (Professor Tarhatullah %han for his undaunting support and blessings that made me possible to achieve my goals.

I am thankful to (Professor Suhail j lhsan, Chairman, (Department of (English for his cooperation.

I thanks my students Soheltlziz and (Ruchika for their wonderful cooperation, assistance and devotion that they provided me in the wake of the final moments of this thesis. They have been a wonderful bunch of enthusiasm and energy that gave me much needed motivation to sort out apprehensions that would come up at the last moment.

I owe gratitude and sincere appreciation to (Dr. 'M.ohd. (Rizwan Xhan for the help that he provided through his advices and encouraging remarks.

I thanks tfe office staff of Maulana flzad Library, Seminar Library of English (Department at J&94.U, American Centre Library, (New (Delhi, Central Library, University of (Delhi, South Campus Central Library, University of (Delhi, and (British Council, (New (Delhi for the assistance that the provided me while I searched and consulted literature from various fields.

9Ay work js a tribute to my parents for everything that they have provided me with and that includes the motivation to work on this thesis. I owe my heartfelt appreciation and gratitude to Shweta, my sister for making every difficult thing a smooth sail and for being always there to provide moral support. I express my indebtedness to my brotherflmit and sister-in-law %ritikaforthe unrelenting support that they provided me with.

Vibha Sharma