

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I wish to express my deep sense of gratitude to the late Professor M. Umaruddin who helped me in many ways and was always a source of inspiration and encouragement to me.

Professor Sander and Professor Graumann of the University of Bonn (Germany) exercised important influence upon my thinking and provided valuable guidance in the planning, design and conduct of the present investigation. I am extremely grateful to them. I am also thankful to Professor Harding and Dr. Reeves of Bedford College (London) who in the initial stages of my research work gave valuable suggestions.

I am highly indebted to Professor Anwar Ansari, Head of the Department of Psychology, who inspite of his heavy academic and administrative responsibilities, found time to go through all the chapters. He examined critically every aspect of the present research and gave constructive and valuable suggestions in the organization and editing of the present work.

Professor S. Kohsin of Patna, Professor A. Mujib of Aligarh Muslim University, Professor D. Sinha of Allahabad and Dr. Froelich of Bonn University have given me useful suggestions time and again. I am highly thankful to them all. I am also indebted to scores of authors and investigators whose works have been cited in this thesis.

My friend, Dr. A. Jamal Khwaja, my wife, Mehjabeen and many others have given me encouragement and moral support. I am sincerely thankful to them.

Last, but not least, I should thank Mr. Hashood Alam Raz who typed this thesis.
