ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am indebted to my guide Dr. M. A. Haniffa, Reader Department of Zoology, St. Xavier's College (Autonomous), Palayankottai for his presence, guidance and immense inspiration, which has contributed in a large measure to the completion of the thesis.

I must express my gratitude Dr. R. Palaniappan, Head of the Department of Microbiology, Sri Paramakalyani College, Alwarkurichi for permitting me to undergo my treatment studies and microbiological aspects of my work in his esteemed institution. I owe my ardent gratitude to him in various ways, which helped me to finish thesis work.

I express my gratefulness to Mr. Gowri Sankar, Lecturer, P. G. Department of Microbiology, Sri Paramakalyani College, Alwarkurichi. He has helped me in microbiological investigation of my thesis work.

I am immensely thankful to Mr. Karthikeyan, Assistant Environmental Engineer, Tamil Nadu Pollution Control Board, in providing experimental plan in part of my thesis work.

It is great pleasure to thank Mr. Dharmaraj, Technical Assistant, ICAR Unit, Sri Parasakthi College, Courtalam for his valuable help in designing biogas digester, which is part of my research work.

My heartful thanks are also extended to Dr. K. Ramasamy, Department of Environment Science, Tamil Nadu Agricultural College, Coimbatore for providing a valuable reference material, which helped me in designing the experimental part of my thesis work.

I am very grateful to Rev. Fr. Packiaraj, Principal and Dr. Ignachimuthu, (former principal) St. Xavier's College, Palayankottai for giving opportunity to carryout my thesis in this esteemed college.

I extend my sincere thanks to Mr. C. Vijayakumar, Senior Research Fellow, Centre for a Environmental Science, Manonmaniam Sundaranar University for all the help and assistance rendered during my work.

I am also thankful to Tamil Nadu Pollution Control Board, Chennai for permitting me to do Research Work leading to Ph.D., degree.

My amble thanks are to Mr. CT. Kannan, ABHI DTP, who has rendered a great help in bringing out my hard work in a pleasing attracting booklet.