Acknowledgements

I am thankful to my Alma Mater the University of Burdwan for having provided me with the opportunity to start working as a NET-qualified Research Fellow at the Department of English under the joint supervision of Prof. Anima Biswas and Prof. D.N. Bandyopadhyay. I express my profoundest gratitude to both of them — their painstaking and co-ordinated guidance, invaluable suggestions and analyses, as also their mental support and encouragement have sustained me through rigorous process of completing my research project and writing my dissertation on “The Semiotics of Churchill’s Theatre.”

I express my thanks to Dr Sukriti Ghosal, Principal of M.U.C. Women’s College Burdwan, (where I have been working as full-time Lecturer in English /Assistant Professor of English), for his encouragement and cooperation in all matters. I am grateful to all my esteemed colleagues at M.U.C. Women’s College, and particularly, to Dr Swati Chatterjee and Dr Pradipto Sengupta, for their cooperation in all matters. Dr Mohua Ganguly and Siddharta Bhadra helped me with books. My thanks should go to my students – Kasturi and Sucharita, in particular, for having supplied me with books from various sources/libraries.

I must express my special thanks to Ms Tuli Chatterjee (a former student of our Department, now resident of the US) and Dr Arnab Bisi for their all-out help in finding out very important books on my subject and sending it down to me from US. I sincerely express my indebtedness to all my teachers at the Department of English, Burdwan University, and in particular, to Dr Angshuman Kar (HOD) for helping me with some relevant study materials, to Dr Himadri Lahiri (Reader) for helping with my Bibliography, and also to Prof. Rama Kundu, Prof. BK Das, for their valuable suggestions at various stages of my research. I am thankful to Dr Ajoy Ranjan Biswas (retired Reader in English, Burdwan Vivekananda College) for his inspiring comments on my work. I express my thanks to Dr Manas Mukhopadhyay for his valuable suggestions.

I am deeply indebted to my friends Antara Mukherjee, Ramanuj Konar and Devamitra Chakraborty for their encouragement and support all through. I also acknowledge the help received from Saikat Sarkar, Dr Nibedita Mukherjee, and Debsankar Sil.

I should express my thankfulness to the Librarians and Staff of the Burdwan University, Central Library, the National Library, Kolkata, the British Council Library, Kolkata and also the M.U.C. Women’s College Library, for allowing me to make use of their rich stock of relevant books and journals.

Finally, I would like to acknowledge the all-out support from my family – my mother Smt. Prabha Bhadra, and my in-laws, and my husband Joydeep Lahiri (who particularly helped me with certain relevant photographs used in my dissertation). I must mention my unending love and reverence for my late father Asit Kumar Bhadra whose blessings have all along spiritually sustained me all through the long-drawn period of my laborious research work.

Suranjana Bhadra (dahiri)

26. 11. 2010