ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am really thankful to Dr Gautam Mitra, Associate Professor, Department of Business Administration, University of Burdwan, for consenting to be my guide in this effort and helping me to complete this work. It was Dr Mitra who selected this topic as the area of this thesis. I express my respect and gratitude to him. Frankly speaking, without his sincere guidance it would have been impossible for me to complete the study. If it had not been his kind cooperation and meticulous reviewing of the work, this thesis would not have attained the proper form.

Any acknowledgement of this effort would have to include the three people who played a very crucial role in this entire process. They are Dr Ruma Kundu, Mr Nasiruddin Molla and Mr Srikanta Kundu. But for their constant presence, this thesis would simply not have been possible. Dr Kundu played a central role with regard to the analytical portion of this thesis. She was also a constant critic who really helped me to set the direction of the work. Mr Molla with his wonderful expertise in computers was instrumental in arranging the tables, contents and overall layout of the thesis within a very short time. I am really indebted to him for making time for me even in the face of more pressing engagements. Mr Kundu was the guiding force of the analytical segment of the work. I am really grateful to him for being available to me at odd hours of the day and in spite of the pressures of his own research engagements at the Indian Statistical Institute. Without him and Dr Kundu it would not have been possible for me to make sense of the time series methodologies that constitute the bulk of the analysis. It was also because of Mr Kundu’s extremely patient support that I could get acquainted with softwares like Eviews and JMulti which were instrumental in providing the results of the analysis.

Words are not enough to express my gratefulness to Dr Jaydeb Sarkhel, Professor in the Department of Commerce, and Dr Arup Kumar Chatterjee, formerly Dean of Arts, University of Burdwan both for their helpful suggestions as well as their patience in dealing with my queries. In this connection, I would also like to thank Dr Debdas Rakshit of Department of Commerce, University of Burdwan for his clarifications in the analytical portion of the work. Thanks are also due to Dr Soumyendra Kishore
Dutta, presently Head, Department of Economics, University of Burdwan for his constant encouragement and support.

I would be failing in my duties if I did not express my gratitude to the faculty members of the Department of Business Administration, University of Burdwan for their guidance. In particular I would like to thank Prof (Dr) Dilip Roy for his suggestions from time to time and Dr Arindam Das for dealing with my queries. I will also take this opportunity for thanking my friends Dr Ranjan Gupta, Dr Partha Sarkar and Dr Kaushik Mondal for their moral support.

I would like to thank Dr Arindam Gupta who was one of our teachers in Finance at the Department of Business Administration in the University of Burdwan for getting me interested in the world of stock markets through his classes on the capital markets. Thanks are also due to my former employers at the Management Institute of Durgapur and B.B.College Asansol for allowing me to pursue my research work in spite of different organisational responsibilities. I would also like to express my gratitude to my family, particularly my mother Smt Bharati Mandai, for patiently allowing me to continue this research work, sometimes at the cost of family responsibilities.

Last, but definitely not the least, any errors or omissions that may have remained despite my best possible efforts are entirely mine.
