ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

From conceptualization to the completion of the study, it has been an enriching journey for me by reason of people's cooperation, encouragement and valuable suggestions, which I needed and got throughout the period of study.

Many people helped me in various capacities during the process of completion of this thesis. Though I am unable to mention all the names here, some persons specifically deserve to be acknowledged for their help, support and encouragement without which it would not have been possible to complete the work.

The unflinching support of my research supervisor, Prof. Bapukan Choudhury, who assured his availability despite his extremely busy schedule packed with several urgent academic pre-occupations cannot be thanked in mere words. We did have differences in opinion but these differences made the study challenging so much so that at every step we tried to find some room for improvement. It is his erudite guidance and inspiration due to which I tried to do justice to the best of my ability and understanding.

The blessings and affection that I received from my beloved teacher Prof. A. N. M. Irshad Ali should be put on record, which always helped me getting out of despair caused by some or other academic/personal setback at times. He always kept a fatherly eye on me due to which nothing could dislocate me from my doctoral venture.

I wish to thank Prof. B. K. Medhi, Head of the Department of Anthropology, for his help and encouragement from time to time.

I have to put on record the support and brotherly care provided by my teacher Dr. Sushil Sinha who was always there with me, particularly during the financial crunch that I had during the initial part of my research. For similar reasons, Dr. Snigdha Chakraborty (CRS, Kolkata), Mr. A. A. Choudhury (WODWICHEE, Hailakandi) and Dr. Aniruddha Dey (PRISM, Kolkata) deserve my thanks and appreciation.

I also wish to thank all the other teachers of the Department of Anthropology, Gauhati University – their critical inputs throughout the study helped me a great deal. The non-teaching personnel of the Department of Anthropology, Gauhati University also deserve my thanks and appreciation for their co-operation and help every now and then.
I also thank the authorities of Punjabi University (Patiala), Punjab University (Chandigarh), Calcutta University (Kolkata), Indian Statistical Institute (Kolkata), Dibrugarh University. Gauhati University, Assam Medical College (Dibrugarh), Omeo Kumar Das Institute of Social Change and Development (Guwahati), National Institute of Public Cooperation and Child Development (North East Regional Centre), National Institute of Rural Development (North East Regional Centre), Assam Agricultural University (Jorhat), Regional Medical Research Centre (Dibrugarh), Assam Institute for Research on Tribals and Scheduled Castes (Guwahati), and National Medical Library (New Delhi) for allowing me to access their libraries.

I wish to thank Sports Authority of India Netaji Subhas National Institute of Sports (Patiala) for having put their trust on me and awarding me a fellowship for two years, during which I could avail myself of ample scope of consulting literature on somatotypes and allied things.

I wish to specifically put on records the inspiration, suggestions and constructive criticisms I received from Dr. Chiranjeeb Kakoty, Director, NESPYM during the last stage of preparing the thesis.

The contributions of H. A. Choudhury, and R. M. Majumdar who painstakingly accompanied me to the remote villages and helped me during data collection have to be appreciated.

The cooperation and support provided by the villagers, particularly the parents of those children whom I have measured is also appreciated. Over and above, if the children did not cooperate with me while I was collecting the anthropometric data, no study would have been possible. I thank them for their time and patience.

I owe a great deal of indebtedness to my parents, brothers, sister and other family members for boosting my courage at every step.

Last but not the least, I owe an apology to all those deserving people whose names could not be incorporated here. I thank all of them for their kind and sincere help.
