I owe a lot to many for this thesis. This thesis is an attainment of the desired result of constant source of inspiration, sagacious criticism and invaluable advice of my research supervisor, Dr. Surajit Mukhopadhyay. It would not have been possible for me to take up the challenge of venturing the topic without his unstinting guidance and support. At times it seemed unassailable, but then came his reinforcement for required stimulation.

I express my sincere gratitude and thanks to Biswajit Ghosh, Head of the Sociology Department of Burdwan University for encouragement and help.

I am greatly obliged to Soumen Mitra, DIG (CID), Sanjoy Mukherjee, DIG (IPS Cell) W.B and Raj Kanojia, IGP Law and Order of W.B Police for their kind help. I am thankful to Dr. Partho Ghosh, Director C.T.D.S for his valuable guidance and help. I am extremely indebted to Smt. Subhra Seal, Assistant Commissioner of Police (Women Cell, Kolkata Police) for her unflinching support and help. I also give my thanks to all the women police personnel, Kolkata police who spent their valuable time in answering to my questions and helped in getting valuable informations. My indebtedness is also due to Swapan Chakraborty OC (Traffic), Police training School for taking immense pain for arranging personal interview with the ex-women police personnel of Kolkata police. I am also thankful to Smt. Leela Chaudhury, ex-ACP, Smt. Kanan Kundu, Smt. Pratima Acharya, ex-Inspectresses for their cooperation.

My thanks are also due to the Librarians and staff of National Library, and librarian of Central Detective Training School for their invaluable help. My sincere thanks are also to Sri Kali Prasad Bose, Librarian and other staff members of Centre for Social Science Studies Library for their help and co-operation.

I am thankful to my friend Sarbani for her support and help when it was required materially or morally.

I am indebted and grateful to my parents and all my family members for their immense support and encouragement during this critical phase of my life. Without their blessing it would not have been possible to carry on my work.

Ananya Chakraborty
6.2.06