Acknowledgement

In writing this thesis, I have received extensive help and cooperation from various institutions, teachers, colleagues, and friends and of course, my family to whom I owe deep gratitude.

I am particularly grateful to the authorities of the Department of Business Administration, The University of Burdwan, for providing me all requisite facilities to carry out this study. I also acknowledge the assistance I received from the library of International School of Business, Kolkata; Indian Institute of Foreign Trade, Kolkata, National Institute of Technology, Durgapur.

I consider myself fortunate indeed to have had the opportunity to pursue research work toward PhD under the guidance of Dr. Dilip Roy, Professor, Department of Business Administration, The University of Burdwan. It is his strong statistical as well as management foundation that has guided me smoothly in my research activity. I am convinced that I could not have maintained interest in the work without being profoundly impressed by his inherent elegance and clarity of the underlying methods. His continuous guidance, encouragement, whole hearted support and untiringly monitoring of my research work at regular intervals goes beyond any appreciation and fall short of words.

This academic exercise would again never have been possible without the education, and motivation of my parents, (Mr. R. N. Tiwari and Mrs. Shanti Devi Tiwari). I am also thankful to my elder brother (Sandip kumar Tiwari), brother-in-law (C.B. Pandey), sister-in-law (Priyanka Tiwari), younger brother (Hridayesh Choubey), younger sister (Anupama Tiwari), niece (Aindree Tiwari) and nephew (Anshuman Pandey) for their support in completing this thesis. I thank my husband (Mr. Vivek Tiwari) for being my silent source of strength and support and all those who had helped me in this endeavor.
