Drug abuse and illicit trafficking are on the increase at a tremendous pace throughout the country. The laws enacted for the purpose of controlling this menace have failed to yield any significant result so far. This work aims at investigating the reasons behind this failure, and at suggesting appropriate remedies for strengthening the law and its enforcement.

I am extremely grateful to Dr. N. Sanajaoba, Head of the P.G. Department of Law, Gauhati University, under whose supervision this research has been carried out, for his constant inspiration and counsel. He had personal attachment to the subject which he perceived to be of utmost socio-legal relevance in the contemporary legal research. He took keen interest in this investigation and guided me at every stage of this work in spite of his tight academic pre-occupations and engagements.

I am indebted to Shri Dalbir Singh, Collector of Customs, Shillong, formerly Deputy Director General of the Narcotics Control Bureau, with whom I had the opportunity to discuss the subject on a number of occasions. I am thankful to Shri C. Chakravarty, Director General of the Narcotics Control Bureau (since retired); Shri Om Prakash, Deputy Director, NCB; Shri M. C. Mehnathan, Dy. Legal Advisor, NCB; Shri B. Basu, Deputy Director NCB; and Shri T. Haokip, Asst. Director, NCB (Imphal Unit), for enlightening me about various aspects of drug abuse and illicit trafficking on the basis of their rich personal experiences.
I express my sincere thanks to Shri G.S. Pandher, Inspector General (Prisons), Manipur, for his kind permission for my visit to Imphal Central Jail, and also for his hospitality during this visit. I am also thankful to Dr. A.K. Das, Jail Doctor, with whom I had the occasion to discuss the conduct of addicts lodged in the jail. He also permitted me to interview a few addicts under his charge. This enabled me to get first-hand information about addiction.

I am grateful to Dr. Nando, Divine Light De-addiction and Rehabilitation Centre, Imphal, for enlightening me about various aspects of the treatment and rehabilitation of addicts. I am obliged to Shri B.K. Singh and Shri K. Sharat Chandra Sharma of the same institution for their views on the counselling of addicts.

I am grateful to Shri Prem Kr. Bhatia, Sr. Sub-Judge, Delhi for discussing various matters relating to this work with me.

I express my gratitude to Dr. N.K. Khetrapal, Shri K.R. Sharma and Shri B.T. Kaul, my former colleagues at the Faculty of Law, University of Delhi, for their cooperation and inspiration.

I am deeply indebted to Dr. Avadesh Sharma, a renowned Psychiatrist engaged in research and treatment of addicts, for providing me with important materials and books on the subject of drug abuse, and also for sharing his views, regarding addiction and measures necessary to control it, with me. Thanks are also due to Mr. Gabriel Britto, Director, National Addiction Research Centre, Bombay for supplying me some materials necessary for this work.
I am thankful to Dr. Dewakar, National Institute of Social Defence, Ministry of Welfare; Ms. Eva M.R. Hynniewta, Deputy Collector (Customs); Shri R. Bhattacharji, Deputy Director (Publications), Customs and Central Excise; Shri K.K. Kabirpanthi, S.T.O., Central Economic Intelligence Bureau; Shri R.K. Sharma, Sr. Supdt. of Police (Crime); Shri Ved Prakash and Shri Hans Raj Chawlia for their constant help and inspiration.

I am grateful to the librarians and staff of the following libraries used for the purpose of this research: National Library, Calcutta; American Center Library, Calcutta; State Central Library, Shillong; Sacred Heart Library, Shillong; Gauhati University Library, Guwahati; Rattan Tata Library, New Delhi; Delhi University Law Library, Delhi; Indian Law Institute Library, New Delhi; Indian Society of International Law Library, New Delhi; British Council Library, New Delhi; American Center Library, New Delhi; National Academy of Customs, Excise and Narcotics Library, New Delhi; Delhi School of Social Work Library, Delhi; Central Secretariat Library, New Delhi; and United Nations Library, New Delhi.

I am indebted to Kamlesh, my wife, for her constant inspiration and cooperation in completion of this work. My appreciation goes to my daughters - Jyoti and Deepika - who stood by their pledge not to disturb me at my study table.

Guwahati, Assam.

(DEV DASS RISHI)