ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to express my first and deepest obligations to Prof. Pradyot Kumar Mondal, Head of the Department of Philosophy, The University of Burdwan, West Bengal, whose guidance has enabled me to complete this thesis. Without his enthusiastic help and advice I could not have carried out the commitment.

For expressing my gratitude I must mention the name of Prof. Kisor Kumar Chakrabarti, formerly of Calcutta University, whose inspiration and time to time teachings of the Sanskrit text books of the different systems of Indian Philosophy have encouraged me to get into this field of study. I wish to express my gratitude to Prof. Shyamapada Misra and Prof. Prabal Kumar Sen of Calcutta University who have warmly welcomed me on every occasion of my approach to them.

I must acknowledge my indebtedness to Prof. D. Prahlada Char of Bangalore University and Guru Venkatacarya of the Poorna Prajna Vidya Peetha, Bangalore, who have taught me some important and difficult Sanskrit text books and allowed me to have a good amount of analytic discussion with them.

I should record my gratitude to Prof. Pradyot Mukhopadhyaya and Prof. Sushanta Sen of Visva-Bharati who have found time to discuss with me many things related to my work and have obliged me with their valuable comments and reflections.

I have received encouragements and many useful suggestions from the teachers of the Department of Philosophy, the University of Burdwan, time to time. So I am grateful to all of them.

I would like to thank the librarians and the other staff of the Central Libraries of the University of Burdwan, the University of Calcutta and Visva-Bharati, National Library and the Library of the Sanskrit Sahitya Parishat, Calcutta, for their assistance in my using books. I also wish to thank my colleagues, friends, relatives and others who have stretched their hands of co-operation for the completion of my work.
