First and foremost I must remain grateful to my supervisor Dr M.K. Ray, Professor of English of the University of Burdwan, whose wisdom and untiring energy to discuss for hours each of my problems and to answer my queries from time to time at all the stages of my work have encouraged and enabled me to complete my job. I must be in his debt—always. I am also indebted to my teachers who have helped me with their wise suggestions. Thanks are due to S.Jana, S.Ghosal, G.Mondal, my colleagues and the Principal of N.S.A. Mahavidyalaya, Suia (Purulia), and many of my friends and well wishers who have either encouraged me or helped me by supplying books and xeroxed copies of important articles. I must also admit that my wife has inspired and helped me in different ways. I am also grateful to Sri Ananta Kumar Palit who has typed my thesis with an utmost care. And the last but not surely the least is the encouraging cooperation and help I have received from ASRC (Hyderabad), National Library (Calcutta), American University Centre (Calcutta), and the Burdwan University Central Library (Burdwan). I am indebted to the staff of these institutions.
