ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

During the many years of research and writing, I have incurred debts to a large number of people. First and foremost, I must thank Professor D.K. Barua who provided the initial inspiration and continued it throughout with expert counsel and supervision. But for him, I do not think that I could have found my way out of the various traps with which the field of late-nineteenth century criticism is filled. He had been generous in helping me in all possible ways. My indebtedness to him is such as can never be adequately expressed in words. I have also had the benefit of discussion with Professor Jasodhara Bagchi of Jadavpur University whose suggestions and criticisms I find invaluable. I feel also indebted to Professor Kamal K. Roy of North Bengal University for the kindness he extended to me. He arranged for me a short stay in the N.B.U. Guest-House and thus enabled me to use the University Library. In particular, I must mention that the several volumes of English Literature in Transition which are available there, stood me in good stead. I also received a lot of encouragement and scholarly suggestions from Professor S.K. Das of Calcutta University. Professor Tapan Jyoti Banerjee of Vidyasagar University, helped me to overcome many moments of despair through his inexhaustible enthusiasm for and interest in my work. To him go the thanks of a former student.

I am grateful to the authorities of different college and university libraries in Calcutta for extending reading room facilities to me. My thanks are also due to the librarian,
Burdwan University, who helped me a lot in acquiring unpublished dissertations and getting books on loan from various university libraries through the inter-library loan system. The British Council Library, Calcutta, rendered me valuable service in acquiring books on loan from the British Library lending division, London. I am also happy to acknowledge my debt to the authorities of the National Library, Calcutta, for granting me an accommodation for two months in the Readers' Hostel. Their services were truly indispensable.

I am indebted to the University Grants Commission for granting me a Junior Research Fellowship in the early 1980s when I first began work on this study. Without this grant I could not have started. I would also like to acknowledge my debt to my former teachers at Burdwan University. All of them generously helped me by offering valuable suggestions in the early stages of my work. I am also thankful to Mr. Ajoy Ranjan Biswas, Reader in English, Vivekananda College, Burdwan and Mr. Amzed Hossain, Lecturer in English, Kharagpur College, for their help and encouragement.

Thanks are also due to my colleagues in the Department of English, Vidyasagar University, for their co-operation. I would also thank the authorities of Vidyasagar University for granting me leave during the time of writing the thesis. I should also like to thank M/s. Memory Text, Kharagpur, for the typing. Finally, I must acknowledge my gratitude to my wife for her patience and encouragement during the long period of writing the thesis.

Sankar Prasad Singha