ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The author shows his profound regard and expresses his deep sense of gratitude to his teacher and supervisor, Dr. K.K.De, Professor and Head of the Department of Geography, University of Burdwan under whose inspiration and able guidance the work was undertaken and completed. It is for his valuable guidance, advice, personal attention, critical comments and observations the treatise has taken its present shape.

The author recollects with gratitude the names of respected Professor M.R. Chaudhuri and Prof. P.K. Sen, Department of Geography, University of Burdwan and other scholars and teachers for having supported him throughout with encouraging words during this study.

The author is immensely grateful to Dr. S.K. Bera, Department of Botany, Calcutta University, who very kindly helped in identifying the vegetation species which were collected in course of the field work.

The author also records his gratitude to Professor Ramarajan Bhattacharyya for taking pain of going through the entire manuscript.

Last but not the least the author cannot forget the sincere help and co-operation rendered by the authorities of Central Library, Burdwan University, National Library, Calcutta, British Council Library, Calcutta, American University Centre, Calcutta, Department of Geography, Calcutta University, Department of Geology, Jadavpur University, Calcutta, Kharagpur I.I.T. Library, Kharagpur,
Geological Survey of India, Calcutta, National Atlas Organization, Calcutta, The Ramkrishna Mission Institute of Culture Library, Calcutta and Directorate of Agriculture (Dist. Darjeeling, Dist. Purulia, Dist. Hooghly), Government of West Bengal in the formulation and preparation of this type of stimulating treatise - but for whose help this work could not have seen the light of the day. The author thanks all of them most sincerely.

Author's thanks are also due to Sri Sishir Kumar Mondal for carefully typing out the manuscript.
