ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Let me at the outset express my heartfelt gratitude to my revered teacher and guide Dr. N. K. De, Professor and former Head of the Department of Geography, Burdwan University at whose inspiration and under whose able guidance I took up this research work and have now succeeded in completing it. This success is due his advice, personal attention, considered opinion and overall supervision.

I am grateful to the Director of Public Instruction, Government of West Bengal, for his arranging for financial aid from the University Grants Commission, New Delhi and offering other facilities.

I extend my gratitude to Shri M. K. Roy, Principal, Government Training College, Hooghly, West Bengal for his affording me all sorts of opportunities to conduct my research. I owe my gratitude to Shri M. M. Ghosh, Principal, Malda Government Teachers' Training College, West Bengal for his inspiration and encouragement.

I pay respects to Prof. Dr. M. R. Choudhury, Dr. P. K. Sen and Dr. A. Biswas - my teachers at Burdwan University, whose lectures, co-operation and advice inspired me to take up the present study.

My sincere gratitude is also to the Department of Geography, Burdwan University, Department of Geography, Chandernagore Government College, Department of Geography, Government Training College, Hooghly for help to use their laboratories and libraries. My heartiest gratitude is placed to the Meteorological Department, Calcutta and Geological Survey of India, Calcutta for their allowing me to use their libraries.
I am no less grateful to my brotherly Sri Shyamsundar Pal, Teacher, Dr. Sital Prosad Ghosh Adarsha Vidyalaya, Chandernagore for his extensive help to my research - both in the field as well as in the laboratory work. Words practically fail to express my gratitude to my brotherlike Debaprosad Das who is sun and shower accompanied me in my field work and rendered me every help.

More acknowledgement of gratitude would, I think, belittle to the able spouse of my able guide Smt. Santi De, whose co-operation and constant inspiration inspired me all along.

I have received unstinted support, co-operation, encouragement and inspiration in various ways from my wife Ila.

I am deeply grateful to my revered teachers Sri Nirmal Mustafi, retired professor of Chandernagore Government College and Sri Maninda Nath Kundu, retired teacher of Chandernagore D. C. R. Banga Vidyalaya who have revised the entire manuscript with living care.

I am thankful to Sri Dulal Chandra Ghosh, who has typed the whole manuscript to my entire satisfaction.

I am grateful to those peasants, inhabitants and Anchal Panchayets of my study area who have helped me by supplying valuable data.

I reverentially remember my father and mother now in their heavenly abode, but for whose blessings it would not have been possible for me to finish this difficult task.

I also recollect the revered departed Prabir Kumar Ghosh (formerly Head of the Department of Geography, Government Training College, Hooghly) who was like an older brother to me and who would have been highly pleased at the completion of this research work.

Finally, I extend my gratitude to my numerous friends and well-wishers to whom it has not been possible for me to make a reference here.

(Santimay Chattopadhyay)