ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This PhD thesis is the result of a challenging journey, upon which many people have contributed and given their support.

Firstly, my deepest gratitude is towards my guide, Dr. Prakash M Halami. I have been amazingly fortunate to have an advisor like him who gave me the freedom to explore on my own and at the same time the guidance to recover when my steps faltered. He taught me how to question thoughts and express ideas. His patience and support helped me overcome many crisis situations and finish this endeavor. I am grateful to him for holding me to a high research standard and enforcing strict validations for each result, and thus teaching me how to do research. Words are insufficient to express my gratitude towards Dr Bhaskar Narayan who has been always there for timely advice and encouragement both in terms of technical details of my work and giving insight into the field of fish processing. I am deeply grateful to him for the long discussions that helped me sort out the issues with regard to my work. His insightful comments and constructive criticisms at different stages of my research were thought-provoking which helped me focus my ideas. I am also thankful to him for encouraging the use of correct grammar and consistent notation in the preparation of the thesis. I sincerely thank both of them for carefully reading and commenting on countless revisions of this manuscript.

It is my privilege to express my thankfulness to Prof. Ram Rajasekharan Director, CSIR-CFTRI, Mysore, for his permission as well as facilities to carry out research work in the institute. I would also like to thank Dr. G.V. Venkateswaran, Head, Department of Food Microbiology, CFTRI, Mysore, for his support in all the pursuits during my research work.
