ABSTRACT

“An Analytical Study into the impact of Government Welfare Programme on Women and Children in Akola District” is the topic of the present research and while writing summary of the research, impact of different government schemes on the beneficiaries dispersed in different parts of Akola district.

The centre point of the present research is the relation between the government welfare schemes and the beneficiaries of these schemes with impact of these schemes on their families, economical, social lives.

The topic of the present research is “An Analytical Study into the impact of Government Welfare Programme on Women and Children in Akola District”. To undertake the research, firstly different government welfare schemes for women and children are studied. A booklet of Women and Children Welfare Schemes is closely referred and its actual implementation is studied in reference with the district of Akola. The study made a conscious research on what welfare schemes of the state government are implemented by the Women and Child Development department, the names of those schemes, the grants given under these schemes, where beneficiaries have to make applications for the grants of the scheme and the duration of aids etc. are carefully studied.

Different welfare schemes are implemented by the Maharashtra state government for empowerment of women and children. Money is spent on the schemes. The present study attempts to take conscious glance on women and child welfare schemes implemented in Akola district and take review whether development of women and children is really achieved, whether the beneficiaries get regular aid, whether there is expectation in rise in aids, whether change is required in these schemes, whether a pace of development could increase if the required changes are made, whether the schemes are implemented properly, whether corruption and administrative lethargy is seen in the implementation etc.

The first chapter is a general introduction to the topic selected for the present study. Different efforts are made by Women and Child Welfare Department to ensure empowerment and development of socially neglected sections of the society. But to study the conduction of women in right perspective and to see whether these efforts have improved their condition, first of all it is required to have a glance on condition on women in society since historic initial period of history.

In the second chapter of the present research, a review of literature available on women and children has been taken. It covers different research papers, books, reports and other published materials in newspapers, periodicals and magazines. The chapter takes a complete review of the condition of women and children in the selected district of Akola. It also studies available material discussing the impact of the government welfare schemes on the target beneficiaries.

The first part of this proposed research carries objectives of Research, Hypothesis scope of Research as well as the details of various techniques and methods used, under Methods of Research. In the second part, the information has been provided on the various schemes for women and child welfare implemented by the department of women and child welfare.

The 4TH Chapter of the present research is vital importance from research stand points as it analyzes and interprets the data collected from the interview schedules collected from the target beneficiaries of different schemes of District Women and Children Welfare Department.

The 5th chapter focused on checking validity and truth of the hypotheses, conclusion and recommendation.
