The scholar after the thorough study of the facts about the prevailing provisions of the Capital Punishment in Indian Judicial System has reached to a conclusion that in spite of several lacunas in the legal provisions and Acts, the Indian Judicial System tries to do justice with all, but due to lack of sources the justice in India is usually delayed which amounts to injustice i.e. Justice delayed is equal to justice denied. In prevailing circumstances in the country there are several criminals who have been awarded with Death Penalty but they have been waiting for execution and living their life under fear of being killed one day which is quite inhuman at the same time the victims of those criminal are also waiting for their execution and justice being done. In this way people of India are not being given justice even after doing justice by the Courts of India.
