CHAPTER – I  INTRODUCTION  1-34

1.1 Introduction
1.2 Origin and source of Separation of Powers
1.3 Meaning of Separation of Powers
1.4 Doctrine of Separation of Powers
1.5 World wide Acceptance
1.6 Opposition as Fusion of Powers
1.7 Why Need Separation of Powers
1.8 Identification of Problem and Justification of Research on the Subject
1.9 Objectives of the Study
1.10 Hypothesis of Study
1.11 Research Methodology
1.12 Review of Literature
1.13 Scheme of Chapterization

CHAPTER – II  SEPARATION OF POWERS: HISTORICAL BACKGROUND  35-70

2.1 Introduction
2.2 Historical Background
   2.2.1 Theories of Separation of powers
   2.2.2 Ancient Theory: - Separation of Powers
   2.2.3 Modern Theory: - Separation of Powers
2.2.4 Montesquieu- The originator

2.2.5 Effect of the Theory

2.2.6 Criticism of Theory of the Separation of Powers

2.3 Historical Development of Financial Federal Relations in India

2.3.1 Evolution and Development From 1850 to 1919

2.3.2 Evolution and Development from 1919 to 1935

   2.3.2.1 Government of India Act, 1919 :
   2.3.2.2 Maston Award
   2.3.2.3 Taxation Inquiry Commission
   2.3.2.4 Indian Statutory Commission, 1930
   2.3.2.5 Peel Committee Report
   2.3.2.6 Percy-Committee Report
   2.3.2.7 Second Peel Committee
   2.3.2.8 White Paper on Constitutional Reforms

2.4 Evolution and Developments from 1935 to 1950

   2.4.1 Government of India Act, 1935
   2.4.2 Niemeyer Inquiry Report
   2.4.3 Deshmukh Award
   2.4.4 Krishnamachari Inquiry
   2.4.5 Sarkar Committee Depute

2.5 Application of the Doctrine of Separation of Powers in Modern Time

2.6 Present Scenario

CHAPTER III CONCEPT OF SEPERATION OF POWERS IN INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVE 71-128

3.1 Introduction

3.2 Separation of Powers in the United States of America

   3.2.1 Presidential form of Government
   3.2.2 Relaxation of rigours
   3.2.3 Pragmatic aspect of the separation doctrine
   3.2.4 The Constitutional Provisions
3.2.5 The Practical Scenario
3.2.6 Judicial Pronouncements
3.2.7 Super-Injunctions
3.2.8 Separation of executive and legislature
3.2.9 Recent changes
3.2.10 Legislature and judiciary
3.2.11 Parliamentary privilege
3.2.12 The executive and judiciary

3.3 The Constitutional Reform Act, 2005

3.4 Judicial Appointments

3.5 Separation of Powers in UK
   3.5.1 Classification of Powers
   3.5.2 The Independence of the Judiciary
   3.5.3 The executive and the legislature
   3.5.4 The Executive and the Judiciary
   3.5.5 The legislature and the judiciary
   3.5.6 Recent Development

3.6 The Doctrine in Canada

3.7 The Doctrine in France

3.8 The Doctrine in Australia
   3.8.1 Legislative and executive powers
   3.8.2 Separation of Legislative and Executive Powers
   3.8.3 High Court’s interpretation of the Separation of Powers
   3.8.4 The High Court’s rationale for the Separation of Powers doctrine
   3.8.5 The Separation of Powers in the Commonwealth
   3.8.6 Separation of Judicial and Non-Judicial Powers
   3.8.7 Separation of Federal Judicial Powers
   3.8.8 Separation of Powers in the States

3.9 Separation of Powers in China
   3.9.1 Traditional Chinese Law
   3.9.2 The Chinese Legal System
   3.9.3 Modern China
CHAPTER – IV  CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS  129-224

4.1 Introduction
4.2 Constitutional status and practice of Separation of Power in India:
4.3 The scheme of Distribution of Legislative Powers
   4.3.1 The Union List
   4.3.2 The State List
   4.3.3 The Concurrent List
4.4 Supremacy of Parliament in Certain Spheres
   4.4.1 Superiority of Union List
   4.4.2 Residuary Power with Parliament
4.5 Union Legislation in the State field
   4.5.1 Legislation during the Proclamation of Emergency
   4.5.2 Delegation of Power by two or more State or with the Consent of States
   4.5.3 Legislation for Giving Effect to International Agreements
   4.5.4 Presidential Veto Power over State Legislation
4.6 Repugnancy between Central Laws and State Laws
4.7 Tension between Strong Centre and Autonomy of States
4.8 Doctrine in India
   4.8.1 Doctrine of Extra territorial Nexus
   4.8.2 The Doctrine of Colourable Legislation
   4.8.3 Doctrine of Pith and Substance

Chapter – V RECENT JUDICIAL TRENDS ON SEPARATION OF POWERS  225-304

5.1 Introduction
5.2 Judicial View on the Doctrine of Separation of Powers
5.3 Federalism vis-a-vis basic Structure
   5.3.1 The facts and the Judgment
   5.3.2 Analysis of the Judgment
5.4 Is Separation of Power a part of the basic structure?
   5.4.1 The Golaknath verdict
5.4.2 Position before the Keshvananda case

5.4.3 Position after the Keshavanada case – Emergence of the Basic Structure Concept

5.4.4 Basic Features of the Constitution According to the Kesavanada Verdict

5.4.5 Basic Structure concept reaffirmed- the Indira Gandhi Election case

5.4.6 Basic Features of the Constitution according to the Election case verdict

5.4.7 The Kesavananda Review Bench

5.4.8 Sardar Swaran Singh Committee and the Forty-second amendment

5.4.9 Basic structure doctrine reaffirmed· the Minerva Mills and Waman Rao Cases

5.5 Strength and Weaknesses of Law Made by Judiciary

5.5.1 Can Judges make law?

5.5.2 Do Judges make law?

5.5.3 Should Judges make law?

5.6 Whether the Doctrine of Separation of Power Curtail the Power of Judicial Review?

5.7 Whether the Judiciary has exceeded the limits of its Legitimate Functions?

5.8 Violation of Doctrine of Separation of powers

5.9 Conflict between Legislative and Judicial Powers

5.9.1 The Legal Position

5.10 The National Judicial Appointments Commission Act, 2014

5.11 System of Checks and Balances

Chapter – VI Conclusion & Suggestions 305-332

Bibliography 333-337